Roof Fire Extinguished—
The fire department was called to the residence of John Haines, on South Commercial street, last night. As a result of a chimney burning out, sparks caught in the roof. The residence is outside the city limits and it was difficult to get water. Mr. Haines was away at the time. His son mounted the roof and beat the fire with a shingle, which, together with the dampness kept the fire under control until the arrival of the firemen, who by the use of a hand chemical extinguisher soon put it out.

T. E. McCroskey of the Commercial club was an Oregon City visitor Thursday.

FEELING TOWARD EUROPE IS REVEALED
will instinctively approach all world problems from the same angle.
"I rejoice that the thing and the president see eye to eye, and see the yearning of the people, whose service their lives have proudly been dedicated."
"Frankness is commended. I came here destitute of the traditional weapons of diplomacy, but fully equipped with the same candor, frankness, straightforwardness and consideration which have characterized a marked degree the utterances of all our chief officers of state with whom I have come in contact."
"As your ambassador went to Washington as an untried Briton, I come to London as an untried American."
"Nothing could be more futile, more delusive and more mischievous," he said, "than to pretend that the American's proffer of a helping hand was a tribute to the 'tender susceptibility' of the British."
"It is not," he declared, "My country stands ready to work with yours, because, first, it is to our own interest to do so, and secondly, because it is to the advantage of both. We do not need being called idealists, even as sometimes happens by those whose antipathy toward us is so transparently material. But we have come to realize that ideals too often resolve into illusions and illusions we have found to be both dangerous and profitless."
Attitude is Modest
"We deceive ourselves occasionally. Even now at rare intervals an ebullient sophomoric seeks applause by shouting 'we won the war.' Far more prevalent until recently was the impression that we went to war to rescue humanity from all kinds of menacing perils."
"Not a few remain convinced that we sent our soldiers across to save this kingdom, France and Italy. This is not a fact. We sent them solely to save the United States and most reluctantly and laggardly at that."
"We were not too proud to fight. We were afraid not to fight. That is the real truth of the matter. So we came along with our allies short of the war. That is all we did and that is all we claim to have done."
Discussing what he called "sentimental, perilous sentiment," Ambassador Harvey said:
"For years I have heard it proclaimed that between Great Britain had ceased to be conceivable. Never have I known the declaration to be denied general approval. Yet it is clear that no one alleged to be a fact is more than an assumption. No assumption of an armed conflict is unimaginable. Any day may witness a renewal of the war of the roses, any day the clash of the blue and the gray in the swamps of Virginia."
But so unlikely are such happenings that the suggestion, even though it incredibly were made, would evoke no more than a derisive smile. But it is one thing to stamp constantly upon an absurd notion and another thing to think of it.
"Now the question arises, have not our countries reached a point with respect to the remotest possibility of a conflict that justifies our forgetting it as completely as the battles of Bosworth field and Appomattox have faded from our recollection?"
"Such," I am happy to report faithfully in the teeth of all mischief makers and scandal mongers, of both nations, has become the settled conviction of our people, and I hope, and doubt not, of yours."
Realities Must Be Faced
"We will get nowhere until we abandon our academic disquisitions of theoretical proposals and manfully face, without mincing or wining, actual realities. We must realize the time has come to practice what we have been preaching and demonstrate our fidelity by action."
That is business primarily of governments and officials charged with public responsibility. Very good. Our new government, solid in all its branches in support of its leader, is both willing and ready."
Harvey cited the Washington administration's proposal for solution of the Pacific communications problem, the American demand on reparations and designation of American members for the allied councils as indications of this willingness to meet reality.
"Because the president has exemplified his avowal of obligations, it must not be inferred that he proposes to become an international meddler," he continued.
"He would be the last to intervene or be drawn into any matter of no concern to his own country, but also no one realizes more clearly than he that the United States is, of necessity, deeply interested in proper economic adjustments and that settlement of matters of world wide importance under discussion and desires helpfully to cooperate."
America Not to Enter League
"There still seems to linger in the minds of many here the impression that in some way or other America may yet be beguiled into the league of nations. Let me show you how utterly absurd such a notion is."
"I need not recall the long contest waged between the two branches of our government over this proposal. I need hardly mention that the conflict became so sharp that even the treaty went by the board, to the end that today, paradoxically enough, America continues to be technically at war but actually at peace, while Europe nominally at peace but according to all reports is not wholly free from the clash of arms."
"Finally the question of America's participation in the league came before the people who decided by a majority of seven millions. Prior to that election there had been much discussion of the real meaning of the word 'mandate.' There has been little since. A single example provided a definition. A majority of seven millions conveyed a mandate that could neither be misunderstood nor disregarded."
League Not Criticized
"It follows that the present government could not without betrayal of its creators and makers and will not, I can assure you, have another thing to do with the league or any commission or committee appointed by it or responsible to it directly or indirectly, openly or furtively."
Mr. Harvey declared that the government would not dream of criticizing or objecting to the league, and exclaimed:
"I am each of public affairs. Perhaps I have gone too far along that line already, but if so, I must ask you to attribute the overstepping to the self bestowing propensities of a novice. You see, I have never been an ambassador before. Yet I quite proudly deny any suspicion of unwarranted, that suitable acknowledgment of this most cordial greeting is all that is expected, or desired of me upon this occasion."
The time was, he said, when John Bull appeared to Americans as a trifle arrogant; simultaneously Uncle Sam was regarded by the Britons as a "whiffing vagabond." But "I am concluded in their places now, in the personification of our splendid nations and the beautiful figures of Britannia and Columbia, hand in hand, side by side, erect and glorious on a plane of perfect equality in the eyes of each other and the world."
Address Causes Interest
Mr. Harvey's address attracted special interest, coming as it did when the probable attitude of the United States toward the tense political situation in Europe is arousing speculation and as the first authorized expression of the American point of view.
Colonel Harvey's address was preceded by speeches of welcome by Premier Lloyd George and the Duke of Connaught.
Premier Lloyd George said:
"The United States has honored us greatly by sending us a succession of distinguished men as ambassadors. The fame of our guest has traveled long ago in this country. His championship of the cause of the allies was well known."
"The war has taught us many lessons. One of these lessons is the immense population of the United States is not of Anglo-Saxon nor even of Anglo-Celtic origin. In the United States there are men of every race. Nevertheless it is a source of pride that in the great events of America the directing minds have been Anglo-Celtic. The great literature of America is ours; the great literature of Britain is theirs. We speak the same tongue; we worship the same great men. That produces a sympathy and community that nothing can break."
Literary Ability Lauded
"We welcome the new ambassador for many reasons. He is a brilliant publicist. I read the other day testimony to his gifts by the president, who said he was 'one who had more to do in the awakening of the soul of America than any one outside of official life, who writes with the most trenchant and convincing pen of any man in this country.'"
"We can never regard citizens of the United States as foreigners. Therefore in the new ambassador we welcome a brilliant kinsman. The future well-being of the world depends more on the good will, the good understanding and co-operation between these two great English speaking peoples than on any other fact. It is the surest guarantee of world peace."
"I am glad then, that the ambassador's appointment coincides with the decision of the United States to be represented in the councils of the nations. I am glad that the new ambassador has been chosen as the representative of the United States and he will be present at the coming meeting. It is essential for the peace of the world that America should be in."

Can You Pick Out a Good Ad?

If you think you know a good Classified ad, here's your chance to win one of the three cash awards the Statesman will give each week for the one who picks out the five "best written ads" on the Statesman classified page, May 18, 19, 20. The best selection, 1st award $2.50.
The second best selection, 2nd award $1.50.
The third best selection, 3rd award $1.00.
The first awards will be announced in Tuesday's issue of each week, the first announcement Tuesday May 17th. Contestants must see that their selections reach the Statesman office before Monday morning of each week in order to be considered.

The Statesman wants your selections of the best Classified ads. Please clip the five ads that you consider are the best on the above dates and mail to the Classified Ad Manager, Oregon Statesman, Salem, Ore.
Last Week's Awards
A number of very clever selections of ads were received last week, and the judges have decided upon the following as the winners:
First award—Mrs. F. W. Allen, 625 North Winter St.
Second award—Bessie M. Hipz, Gervais, Ore.
Third award—Mrs. Nettie Graham, general delivery, Salem, Oregon.
The selection winning 3rd award is published in full below; the others will be published in future issues of The Statesman. Watch for them.

"The world has become more inter-dependent than ever. What has happened even in trade during the last few months shows how dependent one continent is on another. Therefore this decision excites hopes in our hearts. We rejoice in it and we rejoice in the selection which has been made of a man who knows Europe, who understands Europe, who is a whole-hearted American—an American patriot."
"When I propose his health I acclaim not only the new ambassador but the representative of the great democracy of the west in the councils of the nations."

AMERICANS WIN.
LONDON, May 18.—(By the Associated Press.)—The American polo players who are to meet an English team for the international polo cup next month, today defeated the Strawbridge team, 11 goals to 5.

"If this war isn't the last war, the next will leave Europe in ashes. It is essential we should find some means of dragging the nations out of this labyrinth of hatred for our own safety."
Referring to America Mr. Lloyd George said:
"We welcome this new power, vigorous, strong, clear headed, untrammeled with these old quarrels."
American Help Wanted
"We are delighted to see United States coming, not because we want to drag America into these quarrels—that would make it worse. We want America to help us out, not to help us in. We appeal to America not merely as a nation of high ideals, we know that it is not a country that will say 'am I my brother's keeper?'"
