Last Tuesday night Miss Martha Ferguson and Fred McGrew gave a dramatic recital to one of the largest audiences ever attending a similar affair in the Willimette university chapel. Mr. Mc-Grew's cutting of Gilbert Park er's novel, "The Right of Way." into a 40 minute dramatic reading, with characters acted and impersonated, was gripping throughout. The story follows the intensey interesting career of Charlie Steele, a cynical infidel and drunkard with masterful intellect.

Miss Ferguson's rendition of the tragedy "Alice Hartman's Resolve." was keen and intense. In this she proceeds from solloguy to remorse, to bitter self-denunciation, to determination and resolve, to fear at the approach of one of her associates, to anger as she quarrels with him and finally to bitter regret when she realizes that she has stabbed him to death. For a girl to give this entire story without one piece of stage property and alone, and yet make the
