AWAKENING INTEREST IN THE POULTRY INDUSTRY

There is an awakening interest in the poultry and pet stock industry in the Salem district.

The Statesman is especially proud of this fact, for this newspaper is constantly calling attention to the importance of building up many commercial poultry plants in this section, and in other ways developing the industry.

And the Salem Slogan editor firmly believes that by all hands who ought to be interested "keeping everlastingly at it," Salem may become the Petaluma of Oregon—plus.

The world's fourteen greatest hens were raised at Salem; there is no better section of the world for poultry and pet stock breeding.

The Statesman is committed to the payment of the cash prizes at the Salem poultry show to be held next winter; as the Capital Journal is committed in the same way to the corn show.

There is under construction now a new poultry building at the State Fair Grounds in Salem that will be a structure of beauty and utility; thoroughly up to date and worthy of the city and the section and the commonwealth. It will be 80 by 145 feet, of tile and stucco construction. It is being built by day labor, under the plans and specifications of Folger Johnson, Portland architect, and it will accommodate 4000 birds. This fine structure will be finished in August, in time for the coming State Fair.

And it is hoped that the Salem show of next winter may have the use of this new building.

The poultry and pet stock industry includes more than the various breeds of chickens—

It includes geese and ducks and turkeys and rabbits, etc., etc.

There is no better district in the world for ducks and geese, and some Salem district flocks of turkeys will line up with the best. There is an awakened interest in rabbits, and here, as in Portland, many of our best judges are coming to prefer rabbit meat to any other.

But the big thing in the poultry industry is chickens. They lend themselves to economical production of human food in the city back yard, on the suburban lot, and on the farm. The Salem district should have more chickens.

They make up the scheme of five-story farming in the Salem district, with nuts and tree and bush fruits and bees. Other districts have three-story farming—

But the Salem district has five-story farming, and a basement and an attic and a few other stories may be added with dairying, live stock breeding and general and specialized farming and gardening.

In any scheme of diversified agriculture, poultry breeding fits and is of high importance.

In every possible way, every one interested in Salem and the Salem district ought to cooperate in the further building up of the poultry industry. No one thing will add more surely to the permanent and solid prosperity of all our people; and the industry may in this way be extended into immense proportions, with many great commercial plants, furnishing a market for a large part of our products and stability to every other line of business and industry.

Wm. S. Walton made a suggestion at the Salem Rotary Club luncheon yesterday noon that was unanimously applauded and agreed to. It was that every one in Salem ought to be pledged to use all the strawberries possible, in every way, in order that the market for the large crop that is coming on may be stimulated and the growers encouraged. George Griffith, president of the Salem Rotary Club, said he was willing to pledge himself to the eating of strawberries three times a day; and the way he said it left the impression that he would not object to strawberries and cream between meals. The strawberry industry in the Salem district is a valuable one, and it is going through trying times and needs every help from all our people.

Walter Denton spoke to the Salem Rotarians yesterday in favor of the soldier loan measure, and Hon. T. B. Kay spoke in favor of the other four propositions on the ballot to be voted next Tuesday. Mr. Kay spoke from experience when he said the hygienic marriage examination and license bill is the most important of the four which he explained; for he was for eight years a member of the board having charge of the state institutions, and he realizes the importance of preventing the further propagation of defectives, which this bill is designed to aid in doing. The Rotary Club members are apparently a unit in favor of all the five measures.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Produce more poultry.

Push live-story farming, with bush berries, cackleberrys, nuts, tree fruits and bees.

And make it skyscraper farming with dairying, live stock breeding and general specialized farming and gardening.

Take advantage of the fact that this is by degrees of nature the land of diversity and the country of opportunity.

The Salem Broccoli association has seven packages of seed left; enough to plant three and a half more acres. This should be taken and planted today, and if there is any more Valentine seed left anywhere, that too, ought to be taken and planted. The industry should go to the extent of the seed to be had.

Put the time is mighty short now.

C. N. Needham, the day old chick man, has the right spirit. He says that the Salem men in this business propose to make this the center of that branch of the poultry industry for not only Oregon but for the northwest. That's the stuff. It can be done. Then Salem will begin to be the Petaluma of Oregon.

The new men going into business in Salem must think this is a good town. It is. There is room for enterprise and expansion here.

Legion Speakers Visit Three Towns on Friday

The Flying Squad of Capital Post No. 9 will make a three-day play Friday when entertainments and speeches on the Soldier Aid bill will be made at Aumsville, Stayton and Brooks.

The program at Aumsville will be given in the morning and two divisions of the squad will stage the evening programs at Stayton and Brooks.

Local chairmen of the American legion report much interest in the aid measure for ex-service men.

AN ADVERTISEMENT HELPED HER

Mrs. Lucile Mackey, 16 Buena Vista St., Washington, Pa., writes: "Last winter my 3-year-old girl caught a bad cold which left her with a dry cough. It bothered her most at night and she would cough until she vomited. I think she must have had whooping cough. I saw an advertisement for Foley's Honey and Tar. I tried it and bought two bottles and her cough left her before she finished the second bottle. She had gotten awfully thin; but now she is as fat as ever." Sold everywhere—Adv.

WAR TROPHIES ARE DISPLAYED

Fine Collection on Exhibition in Window of Local Business House

A fine display of military trophies is being shown at the Bishop store on Commercial street. There is a complete modern German Mauser rifle with bayonet, a broken stockless older model of the same arm that the war completely ruined, a Prussian helmet just out of the bandbox and shining like the sun; a Krag-Jorgensen carbine, that did not see service in the World war, but that used to be the standard arm of the United States cavalry; and a stack of brass shell cases, for the 3-inch field guns, the famous "75's" of the French army and their equivalent from the other armies on the continent.

There is one German cutless of the type issued on shipboard. There are American Mills bombs, and a few other types of hand grenades such as made it unsafe to live in the front line trenches. There is a captain of the regular army now visiting in Salem who had his shoulder broken by a Hun soldier whom he surprised in a morning storming party. The Hun had only a spade, but he got the drop on the Yankee with that, and lamed him for life—but it didn't do him any good, for the Yankee was red-headed, and a sun man and he had a Colts automatic, like this other big blue devil-gun here in the window. Uniforms and machine-gun cases and a machine gun barrel—the rest of the gun was shot away and tramped into the mud of the battlefield—and French and Yankee helmets are also among the collection.

It is an interesting exhibit. One can be reasonably sure that the young man who stops to look was himself a soldier, for the soldiers know every item by heart, and it's almost like meeting an old friend to see a Hun helmet—with a neat hole drilled through just where the bullet would do the most good.

VICTORY MAY BE LOST BY FORFEIT

Washingtons Win Over Protest—Methodist Nine Drops from League

Wednesday's game between the High Fliers and the Washington 7A teams was played under protest by the High Fliers. The reason was that the Washington team was accused of playing boys who did not belong in the team. The score was 6 to 5 in favor of the Washington 7A team, but they may have to forfeit to the High Fliers as the by-laws say a team may play only three extra men. This will be decided at a meeting at the "Y" tonight.

The High Fliers have secured a new player for their team. His name is G. Barnum, and the boys say he is a whirlwind. There will be a game tonight between the Trojans and the Wildcats a new team on the field. The Wildcats will play the games scheduled for the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school team which dropped out.

This game will not count if the other teams protest against the new team. The meeting tonight will vote to decide if the Wildcat team is to be admitted to the league.

| Team | W | L | Pct. |
|------------------|---|---|-------|
| High Fliers | 2 | 0 | 1.000 |
| Washington 7A | 1 | 1 | .500 |
| Richmond T. Gers | 1 | 1 | .500 |
| Cardinals | 1 | 1 | .500 |
| Trojans | 0 | 2 | .000 |

The First M. E. Sunday school dropped out of the league after their first game because they were not able to get a team under 16 years old.

TROUBLED FOR TEN YEARS

If you suffer pains and ache during the day and sleep-disturbing bladder weakness by night, feel tired, nervous and run down, the kidneys and bladder need to be restored to healthy and regular action. J. T. Osburn, R. F. D. No. 1, Lucasville, O., writes: "I had kidney trouble for 10 years. I tried many remedies but they did me no good. I took Foley's Kidney Pills and they helped me so much that now I am well." Don't delay. Sold everywhere—Adv.

BIG WEEK AT CHEMAWA ON

Industrial Work of Students Displayed for Public Inspection

STUDENTS MAKING GOOD

High Positions Taken by Graduates, Particularly in Music World

This is the big week at Chemawa Indian school, not quite the commencement week, which begins with the baccalaureate sermon Sunday, and runs for six days, but the really big week of industrial training work. The very first school started in Oregon, or anywhere west of the Missouri river, was the original Indian training school established here by the missionaries. Chemawa is not exactly the direct descendant of this original Indian training school, but it follows the best of its traditions, in holding that industrial progress is the salvation of the race. This week is the great display of the industrial departments of this the largest Indian school in America.

All Departments Open The departments are all to be thrown open for the inspection of the public. The boys will have their blacksmithing, harness making, shoe making, printing, carpentering, and every branch of industrial work. The girls will display sewing, millinery, fruit preservation, cookery, baking, nursing, everything that the hands can be trained to do. The displays are open for the school people in the forenoons, and for the visiting public in the afternoon, beginning at 2 o'clock. An earnest invitation is extended to all to visit the school and see what has been accomplished during the year.

Students From Far Away Chemawa has had almost 800 students during the year. The present attendance is above 700. From one-third to one-half of these will remain through the summer, making still a very large number of out-of-Oregon guests. Some come from 3000 miles away at the farthest end of the Alaskan island chain. There is one Sioux, and others from almost every tribe between.

Some wonderful records are being made by graduates of the Chemawa school. Fred Carlin, who played in the Chemawa string quartet, is to lead one of the Leiraunce Little symphony orchestras this year. Willie Reddie, a Hydah Indian from Wrangel, Alaska, who was on tour with the Chemawa quartet, is to play with the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra during 1921-22, under Eugen Ysaye, the great Belgian violinist and conductor. Alex Melovidov, a Russian Indian from St. Paul Island, one of the remotest of the Frigidlyf group, is playing with the Kansas City Symphony orchestra.

Accomplishments Growing The war broke up the regular concert organizations representing the school, but now they are coming back better than ever. Teachers and others who have been familiar with the school for years, say that every year sees a distinct gain in scholarship, in atmosphere, in achievements. The return of the old graduates into the world, is working wonders on the spirit of the school, and Harwood Hall, the superintendent, and Mrs. Hall, who is intimately associated with the school work, say that every year brings better returns from every branch of the school work. They urge every one who can do so, to visit the school this week and next, and understand what a really great institution is growing up here at their doors.
