Peterson Still Alive—With his head terribly crushed, Eugene Peterson, who was injured in a railroad accident Wednesday morning while sleeping on the right of way, was reported last night as defying the verdict of the doctors that he could not live more than 24 hours, given at the time of the accident, and was apparently improving. He is bright and cheerful. His remarkable grit and courage is thought to have much to do with his power of resistance.

Large Gooseberries—6 1/2 cents a pound, shipped and ready to can, Ward K. Richardson, phone 494.—Adv.

It Is Constantly Brought—To my attention that electrical business is being solicited in Salem by men not giving their firm name and who are supposed to be still in my employ. All men will always present a card when soliciting business. Lady demonstrators for washers, ironers and vacuum cleaners. F. S. Barton, Salem Electric company, Masonic Temple.—Adv.

Car Exceeds Limit—A Ford automobile bearing license No. 41238, was reported to the police department yesterday as having passed the East Salem school at a rate exceeding the speed limit. The records show the automobile to be the property of H. E. Meeks of route 4.

Welcome Strangers—Scandinavian M. E. church, 15 and Mill Sts. 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday.—Adv.

Minneapolis Man Here—Dr. E. L. Strout of Minneapolis is a Salem visitor to look after his fruit farm out in the Waldo Hills. He has owned the place for some time, and says that he has enjoyed it every minute of the time. He is an enthusiastic booster for Oregon.

Fireworks for Sale—The Ace, 127 N. High.—Adv.

They Saw the Fair—Manager McCroskey and Stewart John Rundberg of the Commercial club were Portland Rose fair visitors yesterday. The Commercial club without these two smiling gentlemen looks like a funeral in the rain and the undertaker a new hand at the business and nobody there to mourn. The shape of the rooms is there, but there's no more soul than there is in "leaves aces" of frozen potatoes at two bits a load.

Women Wanted at Once—At Oregon Packing company to hull strawberries.—Adv.

Will Probated—An order to probate the will of the late H. B. Broughton was filed by the county court yesterday. Mary Broughton was appointed by the court executrix of the estate and M. G. Gunderson, J. A. Campbell and C. A. Reynolds appraisers.

California Men Out To See America First—"Seeing America First" is the motto of M. H. Huhn and R. S. Cook, up-dated seafaring travelers who are making their way by easy stages from San Francisco to New York. Yesterday was their 5th day out and they say that they expect to take two or three years to make the trip to New York—at least they will take that long if it seems necessary in order to "see America" thoroughly.

They camped in the local auto camp for a few hours but soon set out to see the town. They expect to spend at least two days in the capital city. Letters from mayors of all the towns through which they pass are secured by these energetic tourists.

They came yesterday from Eugene and although from California they had far kinder things to say of Oregon roads, and especially those between here and Eugene, than most Oregonians, according to those who have heard comments from both.

They stopped yesterday morning in Albany and have visited Grants Pass, Roseburg and Eugene before coming to Salem.

PICKERS NOT TO GET RICH

Loganberry Grower Fears Wage Paid Must Be Less Than One Cent

FEW CONTRACTS MADE

Production Here Will Be Large, But Market Still Worries Producers

New Members Appointed On Stock Sanitary Board

Governor Olcott yesterday announced the appointment of B. T. Sims of Corvallis and J. P. Cole of Molalla as members of the state livestock sanitary board to succeed Frank E. Rogers of Marshfield and Frank Brown of Carlton respectively. Sims was recommended by the State Dairymen's League and Cole by the State Pure Breed Livestock Association. Under the law the appointments are to follow the recommendations of these organizations.

Situation Still Enigma

If anybody knows just what the loganberry situation is going to develop, he is keeping it mighty quiet. Some few contracts have been made at 4 cents a pound, it is understood, but this is not set as a season price, and the buying market might make it a gamble to put fruit and risk even the cans and the sugar and the freight if the berries were donated and hauled free of charge. It is believed that only some form of cooperative financing of the pack where the grower furnishes the fruit and the packer does the rest, perhaps even financing the picking bills, can possibly get a price for the grower above this tentative 4-cent limit.

Financing Doubtful

At present there is not much better outlook for financing the loganberry crop than there is of the strawberries that are now ripening in hundred-ton lots. Some berries are going to the Portland market, and local users are taking immense quantities. Some of the canneries are also handling berries, so that the crop is being worried away after a fashion. But the prices are now low, and most are to be sold for all soft fruits that can not be stored and held as apples and pears.

Product Nearly Forgotten

The local loganberry have evaporated to few berries for the past two or three years, that the product is almost forgotten by the market. It is held by some well-posted growers that the market will not buy the excellent canned fruit that it is known, can hardly be depended on to buy the evaporated berries that have been off the market and so are suspiciously new product. That evaporation would save the crop, certainly, say the informed growers, but the even bigger problem then would be to sell the product and they are wondering about it.
