

SOCIETY BY MARGUERITE CLERSON

SALON maids and matrons will gather at the large garden party to be given this afternoon at the W. P. Lord home on the corner of Mission and High streets. Salem women, especially strangers in the city, are invited to come and spend the afternoon socially in the beautiful garden of the Lord home. The Salem Women's club is giving the party for the benefit of the new Women's club building. A small admission fee will be charged.

A group of 15 girls will be presented in a program of hat-dance dances by Mrs. R. L. White. The dances that will be given are as follows: Woodland Sprites, Nature Study, (a) Marquerites, (b) Butterflies, (c) Evening, Rose Ballad.

The girls who will take part in the dances are Mildred Gilbert, Margaret Belle, Dorothy Belle, Cynthia Delano, Maxine Myers, Maxine Glover, Marjorie Webb, Janeth Clifton, Nancy Clifton, Lena Geer, Fay Wasson, Bertha Babcock, Dorothy Livesley, Mildred Roberts and Janette Sykes.

Delta Delta Deas from the University of Oregon and Oregon Agricultural college chapters were guests at a dainty breakfast party Sunday morning at the home of Mrs. Raymond Walsh. Place cards in blue and gold lent a pleasing color note while art baskets of dainty flowers with pansies predominating formed the table decoration.

The guests were Mrs. Lucien Newcomer, Annabelle Goldie.

Eugene, the guest of her son, Donald Bradford. She will return this evening.

Mrs. Adelaide Lake spent Sunday in Dallas visiting with friends.

Mrs. Ethel McGee spent a week-end last week in Eugene, the guest of Delta Delta Deas.

Mrs. Alice Southworth has just returned from Los Angeles, California, where she has been attending the preparatory school of the University of Southern California. She will enter Salem high school as a junior in the fall. Miss Southworth stopped in Eugene on her way north where she was the guest at the Dr. E. W. Collins home.

Mrs. and Mrs. Adsett who have been absent from Salem for more than a year returned yesterday. They were in New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio visiting and for Mr. Adsett's health.

Mrs. George A. White will leave Wednesday for Camp Lewis to join her husband, Adjutant General White. They will go to Fort Stevens either Friday or Saturday and will return to Salem next week.

Mrs. J. F. Vandeleur of Aurora, is visiting her niece, Mrs. George A. White.

Miss Loretta Steele from Chicago arrived in Salem last night and is the guest of her sister, Miss Gladys Steele, head nurse at the Salem hospital. Miss Steele is a graduate of the Royal Academy of Music in London, England. She has been teaching music near Chicago, and comes west for a vacation and visit with her sister.

The Salem Business and Professional Women's club held their last meeting of the year in the form of a picnic at the fair grounds last Thursday. While no regular meeting will be held again until next September it was planned to hold another picnic in August.

A reception in honor of Rex Varley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Varley of 650 Electric avenue, was held at St. Joseph's rectory on Sunday evening, from 8 to 10 o'clock, to which an invitation was extended at the mass sung by Father Varley at 10:30 in the morning. The rooms of the rectory were bright with roses and sweet peas, and as the throng of guests passed into the drawing rooms they were introduced to Father Varley by the pastor, Rev. Father Buck, while Father Drouin and a number of the ladies of the parish entertained in the other rooms.

Mrs. Lane and Mrs. Dimeler presided at the punch bowl, and the girls of the Daughters of Babel sang several selections. Miss Dimeler and Miss Bronkey sang solos and Father Varley was presented with a beautiful silver crucifix as a memento of his first

Mrs. I. Bradford, Y. W. C. A. secretary, spent the week-end in mass which he had sung for the people of Salem.

The young Lavette was an immediate favorite with all he met, and it was with genuine sorrow the guests learned that his stay in Salem would be terminated on Monday. He will return to St. Cloud, Minnesota, where he will be assistant priest at the cathedral.

CHAPTER 95 WHAT ALLEN DRAKE ASKED OF MARGE

Allen Drake looked at me as he waited for me in the next street, put a hand to his forehead and said: "I was surprised at this morning, and I don't know what for at dinner. I had hoped you would work when I was waiting for you, and we both knew that he was not a man to sacrifice necessary work to an empty unnecessary courtesy such as this. He is home would be."

With characteristic promptness Lillian put her thought into words. "You know we'd love to have you come with us," she said cordially, "but we also know how very busy you are and an escort for me is really a superfluous luxury."

"I am in a gang in the luxury," he returned with a blustering emphasis on the pronoun, "but I was sure that the words were only a mask, and that he had some vital reason for going back with us to Lillian's apartment."

I was sure of it when at Lillian's door he dismissed the taxi-cab as we alighted, then walked up the old-fashioned steps with us to Lillian's door.

"The evening is young yet," he said, addressing Lillian directly, "and I am wondering if you would do me a great favor?"

"You have only to name it," she answered with the charming courtesy which is so characteristic of her.

"I have had combination of a lot of work to do and the making of one of my nervous headaches coming on," he returned smilingly. "I happened to remember the wonderful black coffee you gave me once when we were working on a case together. If it wouldn't inconvenience you, it wouldn't inconvenience me."

"Of course," she interrupted with ready hospitality. "Come right up. If Betty has gone to bed I will make it myself."

"I won't come up otherwise," he said hastily. "For I remember that it was you, not Betty, who was responsible for the delicious beverage that has lingered so pleasantly in my memory. I take off my hat to Betty in many things culinary, but she cannot equal your coffee."

"Oh, you're trying to blind my eyes to some purpose of your own," Lillian laughed. "You have evidently fathomed the depths of my vanity. But how did you ever discover my secret belief that I make positively the best coffee in the wide wide world?"

She had spoken the literal truth, Lillian—the most immune from feminine foibles of any woman I know—is as conceited and positive about the merits of her culinary concoctions as a woman with no other horizon than the kitchen walls could possibly be.

I smiled to myself as I reflected that Allen Drake's appeal to this vanity of hers had even blinded her ordinarily keen perceptions to the rather patent fact that he was simply making an excuse of the coffee.

Left Alone. As I followed her into the living room with Allen Drake walking close behind me, I wondered just what errand was bringing him to us with so thin an excuse.

For if I judged Allen Drake correctly, and I was reasonably sure I did, I was certain that his head-ache, no matter how rapid, would compel him to ask not of any woman or would permit him to admit the physical weakness to which the excuse must be only a pretext for his private opinion on his knowledge of Lillian's habits.

"Now, unless each other, a child, I am a commandment, impudently let her and testing it carefully upon a couch, while I get the coffee machine."

When she had left the room Allen Drake turned to me. "Please stick around," he said almost boyishly. "I've got to tell Mrs. Underwood something and I don't know how she'll take it."

TROOP NO. 4 TO GIVE RECEPTION

Boy Scouts Will Honor New Master of First Presbyterian Club Rooms

A "Howdy do" welcome reception will be held this evening by Willamette troop No. 4, Boy Scouts, at the First Presbyterian church club rooms, in honor of the new scoutmasters of that organization. All the old gang are invited, and considering that troop No. 4 is the oldest existing troop in the city, and has a long list of names on the roster, quite a large number of "alumni" are expected to attend tonight's blow-out.

P. M. Gregory, manager of the Weatherly Ice Cream company, will officially accept the troop's hospitality this evening, with George Little, chief of the Buster Brown shoe company, as his right hand helper.

Mr. Gregory has served on the Salem council, Boy Scouts of America, as director of sea scouting for the past two years, and is thoroughly conversant with the scouting program.

"I believe that troop 4 can make all the others look sick," said Mr. Gregory yesterday "and it is my firm intention to give to the boys everywhere that I can that will assure its members of a high standard of scouting."

The banquet will be served at 7:30 o'clock, which will be followed by the installation of the new scoutmasters. Besides the members of the troop, several of the council officials will be present, including President C. B. Clancy and Scout Commissioner Walter A. Denton.

Fire Chiefs' Meeting Is Closed at Corvallis

CORVALLIS, Ore., June 18. — The second annual state fire chiefs convention closed here today. Over 100 have been in attendance from various parts of the state. Today's program included discussions by Chief Tom Crofts, of Tillamook, Chief J. W. Lawton, of Medford; Chief J. W. Davis, of Marshfield; Chief Graham of Baker; Chief Graham of Corvallis; Horace Skow of the state fire marshal's department and Edward Grenfell, fire marshal of Portland. A banquet was served at which short talks were made by Governor Olcott and others. Tom

Graham, chief of the Corvallis department, was presented with a handsome gold combination stop watch by local citizens in recognition of his services to Corvallis.
