SPIRIT OF COOPERATION IN SALEM

The men engaged in growing and buying and manufacturing and shipping fruit in Salem and the Salem district are going through a crisis in the fruit industry.

But they are showing a splendid spirit of cooperation— And as a result of this spirit there seems to be a certainty now that the entire crop of strawberries and cherries is being and is to be taken care of; though the prices are small. But it is all new money, and it is very much better than waste, which was threatened on a wholesale scale before the picking season opened.

In the case of loganberries, a bumper crop is coming on, and picking will be in full swing next week.

There are many sources of outlet for the marketing of these berries, and all concerns and all concerned appear to be working in splendid style to the end that there may be no waste.

Everybody will be obliged to help bear the burden— And if by this spirit of mutual helpfulness, every one doing his share, all the loganberries shall be taken care of, even at small prices, and under the necessity of waiting for part of the returns, it will be a wonderful showing.

The basic outlet, as has been said in these columns so many times, is the juice outlet—

And in keeping this going and putting it solidly on its feet, so that in future years it will be here, stronger than ever, to provide a still larger outlet, the business men and property holders are being asked to help—

As is shown in the news columns this morning. It is to be hoped, and to be expected, that today, possibly, and surely not later than tomorrow, the quota assigned to the business men and property holders of Salem will be fully taken.

It will be a great thing, and a proud thing, if it can be said at the end of the season that Salem and the Salem district, by the cooperation of all classes of people, have redeemed what appeared to be at the beginning a desperate and almost hopeless situation.

The new Turkish National government is not only for prohibition, but for matrimony. There is a bill now before the Parliament at Ankara which would establish compulsory marriage of all sound males of 25 years of age or over. A man under 50 and of a certain wealth would be expected to have two wives. There are lands, loans and free education for the young. The desire of the government is for population. Accordingly, there is a premium on children and bonuses for large families. If a man persists in remaining a bachelor he may be compelled to remain at hard labor all his days. However, some confirmed specimens declare that it would be hard labor to live with some of the women and they prefer to take it by working on their own account and for themselves. And a friend at the writer's elbow declares that an ingrown bachelor is a tough specimen—even in Turkey.

After all, Yap is only another way of saying Jap with a German accent.

Must have been disappointing to the tourists on those comets not to arrive alongside our orbit before the scrap was over.

Recently the Russian government created 16 new holidays for the workers. What they need is not more holidays, but more pay days.

Wonder how a candidate for the presidency would run if he declared that if he won he would have nothing to do with patronage? It is a question.

Another way for Postmaster General Hays to "humanize" the postal service, as he says he is going to do, would be to get rid of some of the Democrats—Los Angeles Times.

American companies have already taken about enough out of Colombia to pay that $25,000,000 indemnity. But how much of it do we taxpayers who put up the indemnity get?

Japanese diplomats are trying to puzzle out why President Harding sent the former commander of the American army at the head of a peaceful mission to the Philippines.

We are really expecting Secretary Hughes to challenge Ambassador Harvey to a long distance, heel-and-toe discussion of just why America went into the war.

rights and vital interest, but there is no reason why we should not declare frankly that this line lies within the field of Mexican policy, as it has been developed of late years.

In concrete terms Mexico's development and her development, and it is essential. But the vital interests and security of the United States would be directly and indirectly endangered if this aid were given by any European power or group of powers. If, on the other hand, American resources are drawn upon for this aid, it is essential that they should be protected from confiscation.

The Mexican constitution of 1917 and the policy respecting the existing property rights of Americans and other aliens require clearing up before the relations between Mexico and the United States can be stabilized. All our government and people of Mexico is the fulfillment of international right and of the responsibilities imposed by civilization upon sovereign states.

Confiscatory laws cannot be recognized, and action under them will be considered unfriendly.

As soon as the Mexican government definitely engages to do its international duty toward our citizens, recognition can and will be granted, and if Mexico realizes the situation an era of mutually profitable co-operation will arise.

But if the Mexicans refuse to recognize international rights and the factors of necessity controlling our common situation, it will be imperative upon us to take practical action. No recognition will be granted, and if overt acts are committed, force will be employed. This will be the last resort, deplored by all but a negligible minority of Americans. But it will be accepted as an inevitable result of Mexican unreason, and should be foreseen as inevitable by the Mexican government in the present consideration of its policy and program. Peace between us can be predicted only upon fair dealing and the acceptance of the responsibilities for legal justice and order belonging to all sovereign states.

Our government will neither threaten nor dictate. It will have due regard for Mexican amour propre, for our purpose is friendly and without ulterior motive. But it is to be hoped in the interest of our good relations that the Mexican government and people will not deceive themselves as to the basic and decisive factors of the situation. Mexico can have peace and substantial aid but only on terms of international right.

ALL KNOWLEDGE

When young Prince Zennir, so Anatole France tells the story, came to the throne of Persia he called all of the wise men together and said:

"My teachers tell me that knowledge is the highest attribute of man and that the wise can dispense it. Therefore I command you to reduce the essentials of knowledge into one work for my use."

The wise men, happy to have such a monarch, withdrew and worked for twenty years, at the end of which they came before their ruler, followed by a caravan of twelve camels, each bearing 100 volumes. Prostrating himself before the ruler, the permanent secretary of the wise men said:

"Sire, we have the honor to offer to you our digest of all knowledge, reduced to only 1200 volumes. In addition there is a foreword of one book borne by a donkey and a summary which is a burden for one she-camel."

"I thank you for your trouble," replied the king, "but must insist that you abbreviate until your work is in keeping with the brevity of human life, and make haste, for we have aged since last we met."

So the wise men worked another twenty years and came before the king a second time with their burden-bearers and with forty volumes.

"Sire," said the secretary, now somewhat bent beneath his years, "we have been successful."

"You have not been sufficiently so," replied the king. "Abandon, decide and hasten if you would enlighten me before I die."

The wise men, their ranks greatly reduced by death, nevertheless worked so steadily that at the end of five years those who were alive brought the king a third time, their spokesman now feeble, that leaves had to carry him in their arms. The chamberlain met them in the great hall and said:

"Why bring ye such a tome into the palace when the king is at the point of death?"

"We have brought to him a statement of all knowledge in only one volume and trust that we are still in time to serve him," weakly replied the secretary, and the chamberlain let him be taken before the king, who was on his death bed.

"That huge volume!" exclaimed the snaking monarch. "I would like them, without having arrived at a grasp of all knowledge."

"Nay, sire," replied the chamberlain, "I will come up in one word all that even the wisest of men know. That one word is PERHAPS."

This did the king come to the heights of knowledge in the twinkling of his life.

NO MONTE CARLO

The owner of Santa Catalina, Mr. Wrigley, the chewing gum man, has told his Chicago associates that if Mexico can get the island away from Henry Cabot Lodge and the foreign relations committee of the senate they might almost be welcome to it. He says that, in the event of a dispute, Catalina will maintain her neutrality to the uttermost. Her glass-bottomed navy will expect all boarders save those who expect to board or stay by the week or month and her peerless standing army will be found standing on their pier at all hours. He says that while the eighteenth amendment prevails the island would make a great Monte Carlo proposition under Mexican rule, but whether it be under the American or Mexican flag, it will never be opened for the free and unlimited coinage of Manhattan cocktails. He has no desire or intention to run a little kingdom of booze. It will be possible to wear a sport skirt in Avalon, but there will be no ostentatious display of hootch.

OVERHEAD WEATHER

The weather bureau is now gathering daily reports concerning clouds, fogs, air currents, storms and other phenomena of interest to aviators and is transmitting these by radio and otherwise to those desiring the service. If a flyer contemplates an air trip tomorrow to Alaska he can get a wireless from the government telling him how the clouds are behaving over Vancouver and just how many humps and pockets there are in the ozone around Calgary. This will be mighty handy for cloping honeymooners a few years hence.

A JITNEY DIPLOMAT

Ambassador George Harvey is adding to the embarrassment of nations by riding around London in a Ford car. This is another evidence of his careless diplomacy, but it is hardly sufficient to start a war—even if the car has a self-starter—Exchange.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

It is sure some job—

But everybody is working to prevent any waste of fruit.

There are a good many ways to dispose of loganberries, and every last one of them will need to be employed to the limit.

Yes, Peggy, still water sometimes runs to moonshine.

Did any one ever see finer displays of roses than Salem shows, here or any other old place?

The comet was at its nearest point last Monday and no harm done.

If President Harding expects to make that Alaska trip, he will have to poke up the ways and means committee of the house and get the man tariff bill introduced and jammed through. Wonder what they are waiting for?

It is a pity the Polk county people cannot live together in peace and forget the quarrels of their roads. It would be better for all concerned.

Col House, after visiting Berlin, considers stable government in Europe the best guaranty for payment of the indemnity, but he is unable to suggest any guaranty for stable government.

Rairoads Must Seek Relief from Legislature

The public service commission without authority under the railroad act to reduce rates and from its service as a common carrier according to an opinion of Attorney General Van Winkle in response to an inquiry from the commission. The opinion holds that it is necessary for the road to apply to the state legislature for relief.

The Benson logging road at Clatskanie was cited as an example.

Certification Asked By Grants Pass District

The Grants Pass irrigation district of Josephine county has applied to the state irrigation secretary commission for certification of a bond issue of $325,000. Prior to this the commission has certified issues aggregating $385,000 for the district.

FIRST LOGANS ARE IN CANS

Producers Company Packs First of Season Crop at Plant Yesterday

LARGE CREWS WORKING

Strawberries Held up Marvelously and Still Glut Canneries

The first loganberries of the year were canned yesterday at the producers' packing & packing company plant in Salem. They are so fine, so big as to look almost delicious for anyone but a hungry man to tackle without help.

The general pack, however, is still a few days off, though there will be a good many of the berries ready for delivery Monday. The strawberries will have to hurry and beat a voluntary retreat, or run the risk of being treated. The strawberries, however, are still almost as big and fine as the first picking. They have held up marvelously, and they are not nearly gone even yet, some as luscious berries were being delivered yesterday as ever grew in the valley. So great is the quantity that some housewives bought them at 40 cents a rate.

Big Crews Employed.

It is through no fault of the canneries that all the berries in the valley are not already in cans. They have had about the biggest crews in their industrial history tenting and preparing the berries in the factories. They have utilized room that they never thought of using for this purpose. A sorting station, where additional helpers could work. The Oregon Packing company has had close to 300 women and girls at work on strawberries, and the Hunt plant is said to be little if any behind. The producers' plant has had close to 150, and is asking for a few more so as to be sure to fill every corner of the factory with workers to clean up the crop. Cherries will begin to come in today. It is understood that all the plants will be running by the first of next week.

No Prices Fixed.

This will be only on Royal Annes, however, so far as present information goes. No prices have been set, or contracts made, on any other varieties. The canneries expect themselves as anxious to handle the other cherries if possible, but as none are in as ready demand as the Royal Annes they are expecting to look after the best marketable crop first.

Only the Royal Annes will go for the maraschino cherry pack, to be handled by the Star Fruit products company at the Salem King's company plant. The company will buy most or all of its fruit through the big cherry pool now being filled by the Oregon Growers' Co-operative association.

The original European maraschino cherry is small and black and bitter, the antithesis in almost every respect of the wonderful Oregon Royal Annes. The berries are "pickled," bleached, soaked several times and finally colored the brilliant red that makes them attractive to the eye. Finished, they bear no resemblance to the fruit as it is delivered from the tree.

Heavy Colors Handled.

None of the heavily colored American cherries, like the Black Republicans, May Dukes or other dark fruits, have been found adaptable for this specialized use.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Sals to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness is a result from many causes, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the blood from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, stinging sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes, sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse, acidic, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Sals from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine and no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Sals is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the seed of grape, and lemon juice combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folk who are suffering from urinary disorders, caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Sals is specially adapted for kidneys and bladder trouble, whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effective lithia water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

—Adv.

They cannot be properly bleached to give the beautiful red that sells them to any buyer. The dark cherries will have to go to the canneries and not to the maraschino makers. The maraschino business is "swiped" from what was once America. The maraschino cherry was an important product of the Dalmatian crown lands of Austria. It has changed a lot here in America.

OBITUARY

Nancy Bell Gould Good died at her home in Salem, Ore., on June 20 at 6 o'clock a. m. She was born in Vanderburg county, Indiana, June 7, 1849 and was married to Henry Jasper Good, August 21, 1876, in Scotland county, Missouri, and moved to Philip county, Kansas, in 1872 where they lived 29 years. They came to Oregon in 1892 where she has lived ever since. She leaves seven children, Etta Howland of Denver, Colo.; Letta Barnes of Salem, James E. Good of Salem, Joseph Snalley, Grace Jory, Stella Moore and William Good, all of Salem; a sister, Mrs. Anna Tucker, and a brother, David Gould, of Scotland county, Missouri; 25 grandchildren and 15 great grandchildren.

The funeral was held at the home, Rev. C. W. Corby and Rev. E. L. Harrington, officiating. Many relatives and friends were present and many floral tributes were contributed. Miss Hazel Pierce and Mrs. Nettie Fuller sang "I Shall See Him Face to Face," and "In the Land that is Fairer Than Day."

Interment was in City View cemetery beside her husband who died September 12, 1913.

100 PASTORS MAY REGISTER

Ministers Already Signing Up for School Opening Here Next Week

RURAL PROBLEMS PROBE

Branch of State Library Installed for Students' Convenience

Sixty pastors 20 from rural and 20 from city districts are already registered for work in the School for Rural Pastors, to begin next week at Willamette university. Others are expected to make up the number to 100, or even more than that.

The school opens Tuesday morning at 7:45, following the complete registration and assignment of classes and work on Monday.

Intensive Study Object.

The work is carried on by the united efforts of Willamette university, Kimball School of Theology, and the board of Home Missions of the Methodist Episcopal church. It is a real "post-graduate" school, giving three weeks of intensive study into the problems that arise before the country pastor.

Some of the best lecturers and authorities on these rural problems, to be found in all the colleges and churches of America, are being sent to help carry on this work.

Prof. W. H. Hertzog of Willamette university, is practically the local head of the school. The work falls directly within his department, that of rural leadership. Professor McArthur, both of Kimball school, will be other faculty workers, but most of the faculty comes from abroad. Miss Cornelia Marvin, librarian of the Oregon state library, is also of the faculty.

Branch Library Installed. A branch of the state library is to be installed in the university rooms for the convenience of the students. They will have a vigorous course of study, that will be equal to the most strenuous postgraduate work of any other profession. The days are to be devoted to class and research work, and outside lecturers will occupy most of the evenings with their lectures that represent their research work for many years.

A number of the visiting pastors will bring their wives, and all are to be housed, if possible, in Lausanne hall of Willamette university.
