Ripening Is Uneven. Owing to the cool weather of last spring and the early summer ripened rapidly or evenly, so that it is hard to get a full car of selected fruit at one time or place. The cherries are a number of days later than usual, and they take a chance with the eastern market, because the California growers, dissatisfied with the cannery prices, have for weeks en shipping even their inferior fruit east, and have somewhat demoralized the market conditions. Fortunately the Californians ripened enough earlier than the Oregons that they may be expected to be completely sold out and eaten up and almost forgotten, so that the Oregon fruit is in the way of a fine, appreciative mar-
