EDNA M. LUNDBERG

Miss Vera R. Fitzhugh, a charming maiden known and loved in musical circles both in this city and Lebanon, was recently feted in honor of her 18th birthday. Thrilling games on the spacious hedge-encircled lawn passed the twilight hours. Ices and cakes were served in the dining room which was decorated with sweet peas and roses. The main feature was a large pink and white birthday cake, adorned with a dainty rosebud, which had bloomed 22 years ago on Mrs. Fitzhugh's wedding cake.

Messrs. Harold Rupert and Wesley Putnam so delightfully entertained with piano and violin solos, just when the "sand man" and dream fairies slipped into the room, that no one heeded their feeble warnings. So it was not until the eternal telephone bell unkindly jingled in the midst of a breathless Oriental game at 1 a. m. that the participants ever thought of home and anxious mothers.

Those present were the guest of honor, Miss Vera Fitzhugh, Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh, the Misses Vera Fitzhugh, Olive Lester, Ethel Rupert, Alice Glaeser, Frances Glaeser, and the Messrs. Harold Rupert, Ernest Aegeter, Wesley Putnam and Ward Southworth.

The Sunday schools of Marion county will hold a picnic at the fairgrounds Saturday, July 23. There is to be a parade of all the Sunday schools. The primary children are to meet at the Jason Lee church Saturday morning where a float will be waiting to take the children down to Marion square, where the parade starts. Each child will bring his lunch in a basket to the church. Please write the name on the basket, as they will all be taken together to the fairgrounds in an auto. We hope that every child in the primary department will be at Jason Lee church Saturday morning, July 23, at 9:15.

The Tri-L business girls' organization met Tuesday night for a short business and social session.

Miss Eva Scott, Miss Josephine Brown, Miss Louise Findley and Miss Jeannette Vandervort returned Saturday from eight days spent at Siltcooke lake, where they attended the Y. W. C. A. high school girls' conference, for the state of Oregon.

Miss Scott was one of the ten leaders at the conference, and the other young ladies went as representatives from Salem.

Mrs. Ralph Burroughs entertained the members of the T. A.

America's Premier Male Quartet Coming

Celebrated "Orpheus Four," Winners of High Honors at San Francisco Exposition, to Sing at Chautauqua

The Orpheus Four, of the Orpheus Club, Los Angeles, is credited with being the best male quartet in the country today. They will long be remembered by San Francisco Exposition patrons for their notable singing there, carrying off the International Gold Medal at that time.

This organization has been touring the country for years. Their repertoire is unquestionably the most extensive of any male quartet. Ranging from the lilting melodies of popular favor to grand opera selections, every number discloses clarity of individual tone, delicate blending, thorough command of tonal contrast and coloring. They will present two concerts on the third day.

C. club at her home on North Commercial street, on Thursday afternoon. Fancy work and conversation passed the time, and Mrs. Burroughs was assisted in serving by her sister, Mrs. Herbert Sampson of Portland, who is visiting here.

The members of the Salem Arts league are to motor to Sandy, Or., today to visit Mrs. F. A. Eason, a member, who is at Sandy. The group are to leave early Thursday morning and will return the same day.

Mrs. R. M. Sherer of Portland is spending the week in Salem as guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Anderson of Mill street, and of her sister, Mrs. E. L. Kapphahn.

Mr. and Mrs. Will T. Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Don Upjohn and children, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lindbeck and children, and Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Selder formed a picnic supper party at Spong's landing Tuesday evening. The men and children of the party enjoyed swimming, and after the picnic supper a bonfire was the feature of the evening.

The Epworth league of the Jason Lee M. E. church are to give an entertainment Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the church. Songs, dialogues, other musical numbers and readings will be the nature of the entertainment. There will be home made candy for sale and an offering will be taken. The proceeds are to be taken to defray the expenses of the Epworth league.

Miss Olga Kirkwood has just returned from a trip to Portland where she visited her uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Hewitt. While in Portland she went on a motor trip to Vancouver and Hood River with friends and some of her sorority sisters.

Mrs. Don Anderson of Lewiston, Mont., who has been here for six weeks as the guest of her sister, Mrs. A. E. Laflar, left this week to return to her home.

Tracy Hatch, who was formerly head tailor at Bishop's clothing store, is spending his vacation from the Meier & Frank store in Portland, visiting with old friends in Salem. He will leave soon for Seattle where he will spend the balance of his vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Laflar have been in Marion, Or., visiting Mrs. Laflar's parents, and also in Portland, the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Moore and daughters Ruth and Helen, and Usona Haid motored to Rainier for the week-end.

Little Rosiland Ogden of Portland is visiting a friend, Miss Pauline Nees, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nees, of 385 Mission street. Little Miss Ogden is the niece of Dr. Ogden, who gave a party for her and some of her friends at Spong's landing last evening.

Captain and Mrs. Arthur L. Davis of Camp Lewis stopped in Salem Sunday as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Legge. They are on a motor trip to California.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Rush and daughters, Helen and Marybelle, motored from Tacoma and are spending the week here, guests of Mrs. Rush's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Liston.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nelmeier and son Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Nelmeier and two children Evelyn and Alfred, spent Tuesday evening at Spong's landing.

James Mott, a lawyer of Astoria, is visiting his mother, Mrs. W. S. Mott of North Commercial street while in Salem attending to some business connected with his profession.

Mrs. Charles A. Gray of Pendleton, who has been visiting friends in Salem, has gone to Portland for a stay with friends there. She will probably return to Salem again before going to her home.

Mrs. T. L. Wharton of Roseburg is visiting in Salem. She is now a guest at the home of Mrs. George M. Brown.

Mrs. Carey Martin entertained with an informal afternoon party, honoring Mrs. R. D. Houston and Mrs. Lilburn Boggs, who are visiting here. There were 10 guests present, old friends and neighbors of the two women.

Mrs. John J. Roberts and little daughter Mildred, left this week for Nova Scotia, Canada, to visit Mrs. Roberts' mother, Mrs. W. R. Slide. They will be gone about eight weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Johnson return this week after a two weeks absence at Salt Lake City, Omaha and Chicago, where they went to attend the real estate convention. They are to return by way of Canada.

Complete reorganization of the state corporation department was announced here yesterday by T. B. Handley, state corporation commissioner.

F. E. Shaw, formerly employed as auditor, has been promoted to examiner, while E. G. Weber has been engaged to succeed Mr. Shaw as auditor. Mr. Weber before coming to Salem was employed by the Standard Oil company, with headquarters in various northwest cities.

Mrs. Neil Bell Rowan, until recently employed as stenographer, has been promoted to assistant commissioner, and has complete charge of filing all articles of incorporation.

A. E. Gebhardt, formerly examiner for the department, now is employed in special work. Other shifting of the employees of the office has made it possible to transact the additional business imposed upon the department by the last legislature without any extra expense.

Mr. Handley says that Mr. Shaw's promotion was well deserved in that he proved himself a most efficient auditor and is familiar with the procedure of corporations.

The question of unemployment does not face the man who has a law.

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER 121
THE WAY MADGE QUIETED ALICE HULCOMBE AND HEARD PART OF HER STORY.

I closed the door of the living room, switched on the light and walked over to the huddled, shivering figure of my friend. "Don't try to talk just yet unless you must," I said, slipping my arm around her and drawing her head to my shoulder. "One glance into her eyes, wide opened, shining with horror, had told me that she was laboring under a nerve strain which it was highly advisable to lessen if possible. She turned her face against my arm, clutching at my hands with fingers that trembled convulsively. "I—I—must—tell—you," she choked, then her overstrained composure gave way, and she began to sob violently, shuddering sobs that wracked her whole slender body.

"I slipped my fingers to her eyes cautiously in the hope that the blessed relief of tears had come to her, but her eyes were dry and hot. And then I was holding her closely, tensely, straining my ears for some slight sound which should tell me that my mother-in-law had kept her word and had put a glass of restorative outside the door.

At last it came, the merest wraith of a sound, but I recognized it. I waited until she had had time to go upstairs again, then I slipped away from Alice and opened the door to find not only the glass I had expected but a basin of cool, perfumed water and a small towel.

With a silent blessing upon my irascible but sterling mother-in-law for her thoughtfulness I took the things back to my friend's side and put my hand upon her head, which had slipped to the arm of the chair when I had left her. The sobs were quieted now, but there was something about the listless figure that alarmed me.

"Here, dear, lift your head for me," I commanded peremptorily. She obeyed me, but I saw that her lips had lost their color and that her face was gray, while her hands were cold. "Drink this," I held the pungent liquid to her lips, knowing that if it were the mixture usually favored by my mother-in-law in emergencies it was strong enough for the effect I wished.

Quiet at last. She drained it chokingly, but its potency was soon apparent in the color which came creeping back to her cheeks and lips, and in the humming of her eyes, which had looked before like those of some wild thing trapped. Her lips parted in attempted speech, but I interposed quickly. "Not a word yet," I said, dipping the towel in the cool water and beginning to lave her face. I kept up my ministrations until the dry heat left her eyelids and I felt her relax comfortably against me.

"Thank—you," she said a little later, raising her head. "I am—perfectly—all—right—now, and—you—must—listen."

"Of course," I responded promptly, drawing a chair close to hers, seating myself so that I was facing her. Her hands were relaxed, quiet, in her lap. I did not rest mine over them, as I would have done with almost any other nerve-wracked woman, for I divined that she was morbidly ashamed of her breakdown, and knew that my best kindness to her would be a pretence that her poise was unshaken.

One question.

"You understood what I said when I came in, didn't you?" she asked. The forcing of the words through her stiff lips was a pitiful betrayal of her still shaken nerves. "Milly is dead?" "Yes, I understood you," I returned.

I saw that any betrayal of the horror that was mine at her news would be the worst possible thing for her and resolved to elicit her story by means of brisk questions which would keep her mind alert instead of allowing her to paint again in continuous narrative the awful thing which evidently already had been spread in lurid colors upon the canvas of her imagination. "You said something about poison when you came in," I went on. "Was that the cause of her death?" "Her physician said it was," "When did it happen?" it seemed to me that my own heart almost stopped beating while I waited for her answer. "Quite late this afternoon. I didn't hear of it until about an hour after it happened. What train did you take in?" she broke off abruptly. "I told her, adding the information that I had just missed the one before. "Then you must have been at the school when it happened," she cried excitedly. "Did—did—Kenneth telephone you there this afternoon?" (To be continued)

CATARRH OF THE STOMACH

YOU CAN'T ENJOY LIFE with a sore, sour, bloated stomach. Food does not nourish. Instead it is a source of misery, causing pains, belching, dizziness and headaches.

The person with a bad stomach should be satisfied with nothing less than permanent, lasting relief.

The right remedy will act upon the linings of the stomach, enrich the blood, aid in casting out the catarrhal poisons and strengthen every bodily function.

The large number of people who have successfully used Dr. Hartman's famous medicine, recommended for all catarrhal conditions, offer the strongest possible endorsement for
