WOMAN TELLS OF TESTS IN PORTLAND (Continued from page 1.) onds when the automatic was used. The maximum time that elapsed was 137 seconds. Washington Cities Better. Figures were submitted for comparative purposes, showing that in a test in Washington cities outside of Seattle during the influenza epidemic and just after the armistice was signed in 1918 the average lapse of time in getting central was 4.26 seconds, and in Seattle the average was 3.90 seconds. This testimony tended to show that in Washington cities during times of stress and under reasonable rates, service was better than in Portland in normal times, but in an era of high rates. Mrs. Johnson said that during the second of the two weeks of the test she questioned the patrons as to whether they were satisfied with the rates. Nearly all of them, she said, complained that they were too high. She was frequently told that the phones were kept only because of their value in emergencies. Many Reasons Possible. In reply to a question by E. M. Cousin, Mrs. Johnson intimated that the poor service might be attributed to a number of causes, but that in her opinion it was lack of experience on the part of operators. The company, she said, considered 3.5 seconds good service. Upon cross-examination by Mr. Shaw, Mrs. Johnson said she made an average of about 30 calls a day during the test. Witness Not Confused. Attorney Shaw tried to tangle the witness on the point that 30 calls a day from any single station would be so unusual that it in itself would be a cause of trouble. Mrs. Johnson would not concede this. She only admitted that it would be unusual for a residence phone, but not for a business phone. "Did you tell the persons you called that you were making a test for the city attorney?" asked Mr. Shaw. "Yes." "Don't you think this would influence their answers?" The reply was negative. Mrs. Johnson said that of the 339 persons only three or four had said they were satisfied with the rates and service. Lawyer Has Friends. "One was an attorney," the witness volunteered, "who said he had friends working at the telephone office."

GOVERNOR ASKED TO SOLVE MYSTERY Colorado Executive Asks Olcott to Assist in Hunt for Mrs. Mayne Oliver H. Shoup, governor of Colorado, has appealed to Governor Olcott of Oregon to assist in locating Mrs. Laura Mayne, who disappeared while en route from New York City to Gunnison, Colo. Governor Shoup said the last information received from Mrs. Mayne was in the form of a letter mailed from Milton, Ore. In this letter Mrs. Mayne said she had been drugged on a train and was being held captive by two men. The letter indicated that it was written while Mrs. Mayne was under a nervous strain. Recently the woman's relatives appealed to the mayor of Milton for help, but he replied that he had been unable to find any trace of her there. The woman was described as being an American, single, 31 years of age, weight 135 pounds, height five feet four inches, heavy brown hair, brown eyes, educated, refined, well dressed. Any information regarding Mrs. Mayne should be sent to Jacob Starr, of Crested Butte, Colo. Of course, the wife has gone on a vacation and the last words she said were: "You will find plenty of bath towels in the bath room closet," or, "I have left you a dozen eggs; eat them before they spoil."—Exchange.
