

FLARES AND FLICKERS

Do you know the legend of the wild goose and his mate? Well, it is proverbial that the wild goose never deserts its mate. Men may desert their helpmates, but the wild goose never. The story of "The Wild Goose," a superb Cosmopolitan-Paramount picture production which comes to the Oregon theater next Wednesday and Thursday, is founded upon this saying. Frank Manners, an architect, has a romantic-minded wife who becomes infatuated with another man. The husband is prevented from seeking vengeance by another woman who secretly loves him. She is married and when her husband learns the truth, he takes a hand in the triangular game with highly dramatic results. In the end the wild goose saying is fulfilled. Mary MacLaren, Holmes E. Herbert, Dorothy Bernard, Joseph Smiley and Norman Kerry portray the principal roles.

The personality of Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle, the noted Paramount comedian and star, is so distinct and different from that of any other legitimate comedy star, that it might be said Mr. Arbuckle's pictures are a brand new kind of comedy, unlike any that has ever been shown on the screen.

Mr. Arbuckle's latest Paramount picture is a screen version of James Forbes' famous stage play, "The Traveling Salesman," and it will be shown at the Oregon theater today. In Mr. Arbuckle's hands, this colorful role is remarkably effective. Mr. Arbuckle vests the part of the fat jolly drummer with a humor that is at once rare and reliable. Betty Ross Clark, a charming actress, is his leading woman.

"Versatilities" is the long word used in describing Walsh & Bentley who merge smiles, acrobatics, tumbling, and hand to hand balancing with comedy conversation interwoven. On the vaudeville bill at the Bligh today.

Wedwood Nowell, the clever portrayer of foreign characters on the screen, will be seen in the stellar role of "813," the Robertson-Cole super-special film which will be shown at the Grand theater for a run of two days beginning next Saturday afternoon. Mr. Nowell first story written directly for the screen, "A Tale of Two Worlds," an Eminent Authors Production made at the Goldwyn Studios, which comes to the Liberty theater for four days beginning next Sunday. The action begins in Peking at the time of the Boxer uprising, but soon shifts to San Francisco's underworld where the young white girl rescued from the Boxers by a faithful Chinese servant, has been reared as his daughter and is coveted by the evil Lone Joe. How she escapes from his baneful influence through the love of a native born Chinese, who sacrifices with his own life that she may be happy with one of her own race, forms the backbone of the thrilling story. Frank Lloyd directed it. Bestica Joy, Frank Glendon and Wallace Berry have the principal roles.

The "Diamond Sextette," a high class musical offering at the Grand today.

One of the best Hawaiian musical organizations on the coast is the "Diamond Sextette," at the Grand today. They promise to play any popular piece written if requested by the audience.

One of the best mystery pictures ever screened is "813," the film version of Maurice LeBlanc's novel of the same title. The picture opens at the Grand theater next Saturday for a run of two days. The big mystery is one of the Arsene Lupin adventures and Wedwood Nowell, the screen favorite, is seen in the character of the mythical French master thief. Mr. Nowell is supported by an extraordinarily fine cast. The picture is a Robertson-Cole release and is a super-special.

A radical departure from the type of society dramas in which she has almost always appeared is Alice Brady's latest photoplay, "The Land of Hope," in which she portrays the role of a young foreign girl who comes to America in the steerage.

Without elaborate settings or fine clothes, this story of humble people and their struggles with grim poverty is one of the most gripping pictures in which this star has ever been seen. It will be shown today, together with a vaudeville at the Grand theater.

Horror kids! The baddest boy in the world is coming to town. You and Skinny can learn a bunch of new tricks from "Peck's Bad Boy," which this first National release is shown at the Liberty theater.

Little Jack Coogan was a good youngster in "The Kid," thereby endearing himself to millions of theatergoers; but, oh my, how he has changed! They say you'll like him just as much, however.

Tom Wilson, who gives his best performance in the Charles Ray film, "Scrap Iron," the first National attraction, to be shown at the Liberty theater for four days, beginning today, was sorry when the time came for the last scene. He states that he considers Ray as big a director as he is an actor. "It's all foolishness to say an actor can't direct himself," declared Tom. "The two Charlises, Chaplin and Ray, have proved that. All people have to do to see that such an idea is all wrong is to look at 'The Kid' and 'Scrap Iron'; besides I worked in both pictures and I know what I'm talking about. Oh, I'm strong for the two Charlises, all right, both as actors and directors."

"Some day when dreams come true" is the theme on which "Hold Your Horses," a Tom Moore-Goldwyn picture is based. The dreams almost drove the dreamers to suicide when they dreamed them, but afterwards proved to be the most wonderful things that ever happened in their lives. Naomi Childers does some excellent comedy work in the picture, which comes to the Liberty theater or three days commencing Thursday.

When "Smiling All the Way" opens at the Bligh theater on Tuesday audiences will be apprised of a motion picture production of strong situations, gripping climaxes and comedy episodes interpreted by one of the best casts ever assembled for motion picture making.

First in estimation, is David Butler as the star, impersonating a new type of socio-economic role. The part calls for every possible variation in the art of mimicry. It is at once sad and then contrast joyful, and then alternates between a philosophical aspect and fades out into a fade in of the sentimental. Supporting him is Leatrice Joy.

Frank Mayo plays three distinct personalities in his latest photoplay, "Honor Bound," which is to be seen at the Bligh theater on today. He is first seen as an irresponsible college youth, then as a man who has bucked up and is making a success of his work, and finally as the "throwback," who has reversed to type. The part gives Mayo an unusual opportunity to display his dramatic skill.

A peppy, stumpy pair of babies (grown up) are Evelyn and Gertrude O'Neill. They sing through flashes of harmony songs, ripples of merry comedy and dainty dances. One is somewhat of a comedienne and the other happily assists in keeping the fun from becoming slow. On the vaudeville bill at the Bligh today.

"Scrap Iron" starring Charles Ray and released as a First National attraction, which will be the attraction at the Liberty theater for four days, beginning today, has been acclaimed by critics the best picture in which this popular actor has ever appeared.

"Scrap Iron" has plenty of comedy, but the story itself is a grippingly dramatic one, strongly tinged with pathos. Ray plays the role of John Steel, whose love and respect for his invalid widowed mother, brings him to scorn before his fellow workers and his best girl. His promise is not to fight, but he finally breaks it after starvation in the prospect for his mother. The fight is the best which has ever been shown on the screen, and it leads to a climax totally unexpected.

"Wet Gold" is the new under-sea story by Mr. J. Ernest Wilton, which is being distributed by Goldwyn and which will be shown at the Liberty theater soon is different from any other under-sea story ever filmed. The under water part of the story took four months to film, and the entire picture 11 months. In this photoplay a submarine is used as a base for deep-sea divers to enter and leave in their work on the ocean's floor.

POPULAR SALEM COPIE MARRY

William Perlich and Miss Esther Englebart Surprise Their Friends

William Perlich and Miss Esther Englebart surprised their friends by being quietly married at the Baptist parsonage by Rev. William T. Miller last night. The couple are well known here, both being natives of Salem.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Englebart, who live at 246 Lafayette street. She is a graduate of the Salem high school and has been employed for several years in Darby Burton's dental parlors.
