The Well Dressed Woman

By AGNES ABBES.
Star in Paramount Pictures.

Never have we been more enthusiastic about three piece suits, and certainly there is ground for enthusiasm. A one-piece dress of cloth, warm and becoming, with a little coat just right in line and length to slip on over it when you go out is a combination of comfort and charm not to be despised.

I found the accompanying three piece suit in one of the good shops last week. It was of a lovely dark red cloth, wine or burgundy, though it probably has a brand new name, and was trimmed with great pieces of squirrel fur. The frock itself was rather simple, one piece, a little low at the neck and a little gathered, and it had very brief sleeves and a loose sash, ending in the longest and heaviest tassels I have ever seen, of red and gray silk. Underneath the coat the frock is heavily embroidered with red and gray. At the hem of the rather short skirt, making it warm and heavy and bouffant, is what pleases me most. There is a wide collar of squirrel on the little coat to match.

The dress may be simple, but not so little coat. It has, besides its huge squirrel collar, two pointed tabs of cloth hanging from under the collar and completely surrounded by a heavy fringe of red and gray silk. And then it has short sleeves, elbow length sleeves. And it is not the first coat or wrap I have seen with them either. Glove makers and furriers—do please.

The women plan to collect funds for the foundation memorials for the national cathedral. Mrs. A. P. Roberts is chairman for the fund that shall be a memorial to Bishop Thomas F. Kelly of Scott. Mrs. Thomas D. Honeyman will head the memorial for Bishop Morris. Mrs. William D. Wheelwright was appointed for the Bishop Scadding memorial. Among others for whom memorials will be formed will be Matthew P. Deady, Dr. Rodney L. Gilsan, Dr. B. Wilson, Rev. Henry R. Percival and Bishop Robinson of Nevada.

Among those who attended the gathering at Miss Failing's home were Mrs. J. B. Montgomery, Mrs. W. J. Burns, Mrs. Talbot, Mrs. Walter Taylor Sumner, Mrs. S. R. Lanthicum, Miss Virginia Wilson, Miss Clementine Wilson, Mrs. H. C. Cabell, Mrs. James Myrtle, Mrs. Donald E. Spencer, Mrs. Helen Van Houten, Miss Cornelia Cook, Mrs. Dillingham, Mrs. Fannie Kelly and Mrs. J. Frank Watson.

The Morning Oregonian, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Talbot was recently in the city, a guest of Mrs. Amos Strong, engaged in her work of lecturing in the interest of the National Cathedral fund.

The following are extracts from the Albany Democrat of September 26: Mrs. C. M. Kimball and Mrs. C. G. Cowles left this morning to attend the state fair for the day.

Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Hodges left today for Salem to camp for the week and attend the state fair.

A. C. Heyman, county agent, returned home yesterday evening from Salem where he had been on a business trip.

Leigh Anderson, Mrs. E. F. Anderson and Mrs. A. J. Rousseau drove to Salem yesterday to spend the week-end visiting at the Sheldon home.

M. E. Snyder, Miss Inez and Miss Martha and Mrs. Wood drove to Salem yesterday to spend the day with relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hixson drove to Salem yesterday to spend the day with Mr. Hixson's mother.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hogan went to Salem today to camp for the week to attend the state fair.

Mrs. Mark Hulbert and Mrs. W. A. Kimsey left yesterday afternoon for Salem where they will camp during the week to attend the state fair.

Dr. Alton Bancroft returned to Salem this morning after spending the week-end here visiting her husband, Dr. Harry Bancroft.

Fred Williamson, county club leader, is spending the week in Salem, attending the state fair and to look after the exhibits from this county.

H. C. Ackerman, factory salesman of the Samson tractor and W. A. Roberts, both of Vick Brothers' firm, visited the fair grounds in Salem yesterday.

Ben F. Dorris, commander of American legion post No. 3, and local grower of filberts, is in Salem this week making a display of filberts and walnuts grown on the Dorris ranch at the state fair. He moved part of the display from the exhibit made at the county fair here.—Eugene Guard.

D. J. Good, wife and daughter, of Salem, arrived here on Friday, where they are to remain for a month. They have taken up their headquarters for the present at the Empress hotel. Mr. Good is past chaplain of the Salem G.A.R. While in this city he and his family are planning on many side trips to be made by automobile.—Oregon City Enterprise.

ed his tiny white kid booties against the sides of the horse, jerked the reins his father held and uttered a loud, crowing gurgle of delight.

"Guess it's a jockeyship after all," Alfred Durkee commented merrily. "Too bad. I'd have taken great pleasure in training the kid to walk in my footsteps."

"Which would have led to Sing Sing no doubt," Dicky retorted. "But let's have dinner. Go along, get seated anyway. I'll probably have a time separating my son from my gift, which I hope you are ready to acknowledge is a real hit."

"Don't puff him up by agreeing with him," Alfred Durkee urged impassioned. "I won't be able to do anything with him now for a month as it is—he'll insist on his own ideas in everything—you know how he is, Leila."

The girl at his side blushed in a distressed and becoming confusion, which confirmed my opinion that there had been some sudden emotional crisis in their relations. That Alfred Durkee had thus appealed to her simply because he wished to seize every opportunity to talk to her, I was certain. I saw Lillian look searchingly at them and knew that she shared my surmise. But Mrs. Durkee kept her eyes averted from the girl whom her son delighted to honor.

As we took our places at the table I saw Alfred Durkee bend his head to Leila's asking her something. She shook her head, and I saw her lips form the word: "Not yet, please."

What's the big idea, Dicky-bird?" drawled Alfred Durkee lazily. "Figuring on making the little chap a premier jockey? Now that's what I call playing it low down upon a yearling. How do you know but he'd prefer an art editorship?"
