These digesters hold twenty four cords of wood at one charge or "cook" as it is called. The chips are dropped in at the top of the digester, and, when i is filled, sulphurons acid to th extent of about 40,000 gallons i run in, a cover clamped on, and the mass is raised to a tempera ture of 300 degrees or more and a steam pressure of 80 pounds i maintained for from 10 to 2 hours, according to the quality of the sulphite required. This cook is then released from the digester under pressure, int a large wooden vat or blow pi The action of the sulphurous acid on the wood separates the fibe and bleaches the color, so that after it is washed in the blow pit it is a white, cottony substance. From the blow pits it is pumpe to acreens and to beaters, when it is ground and ref.ned until is in a fit state to go to the pape machine. This machine takes the stood in a liquid state and it flows of to an endless wire mesh cloth if which a shake is imparted so the the water drops through the wire an at the same time a large part of the wire to the felts and is ca ried between the rolls of metal of hard rubber and from these pre- rolls is taken to the dryers.
