CHAPTER 181

WHAT ALFRED DURKEE "SPRANG"—HIS MOTHER'S CRY.

I sat through my small son's first birthday dinner with the tense feeling one has before a threatened thunder storm. What with my experience with little Mrs. Durkee and the whispered colloquy I had overheard between her son and pretty Lella Fairfax, the mental atmosphere seemed charged with electricity.

With eyes sharpened by what I had seen, I noticed that Mrs. Durkee and Miss Fairfax were eating very little of the dishes over which Katie had spent so much time, although both women managed to make a clever pretense of enjoying and disposing of the different courses. Alfred Durkee, on the contrary, was in the wildest of hilarious moods, as well as most appreciative of the viands set before him. It needed no Sherlock Holmes to deduce the secret of his exuberant spirits. It was betrayed in every glance he gave to Lella Fairfax, whose, however, which were

Game Preservation Law Declared to Be Valid

In an opinion written for the state game commission, Attorney General Van Winkle holds that even though a law passed at the late legislature creating a game reservation to be known as the Deschutes game reservation, states that the reservation is situated in Crook and Lake counties, a definite description prevails by township and range and the law is valid, although the reservation is in Deschutes and Lake counties and no part of it in Crook. A clerical error in the enrollment of the bill caused the difficulty.

Inheritance Taxes Are Paid Into General Fund

Under an old law, money received by the state treasurer on account of inheritance taxes are paid into the general fund according to an opinion of Attorney General Van Winkle in reply to inquiries by State Treasurer Hoff and Secretary of State Koger. In case of an excess payment of inheritance tax money into the treasury, the refund may be made from the general fund.

The interpretation refers to a law passed in 1915 which was enacted to provide a more simple method of bookkeeping with respect to the special funds in the state treasury, to enlarge the general fund and to avoid the endorsement of warrants drawn against it.

merely returned, for the Virginia art student kept her eyes demurely fixed upon her plate for the greatest part of the time.

Luckily, however, there was no one but Lillian and myself to notice the suppressed agitation of the two women. Alfred Durkee was soaring too high to comprehend anything which was happening at an ordinary altitude, while Dicky, little Marion, Mother Graham and my father were so wrapped up in the behavior of the baby that they could have been disturbed by nothing short of an explosion.

"Oh, Uncle Dicky! Auntie Madge!" little Marion cooed, "Just look at Junior! Wouldn't you think he knew everything that was going on? Isn't he the sweetest thing?"

"We admit it, Marion," Dicky answered tensely. "Coily and reluctantly, it is true, but still we have to acknowledge the corn."

"If that's the best you can say, you don't deserve to have such a darling," the child returned satulily.

Dicky Is Reproved.

Her mother looked at her steadily for a moment, with grave wonder in her eyes. It is a method of discipline which she uses occasionally with the high-spirited, sensitive child, and I have never known it to fail in effect. Marion's color rose, but she turned to Dicky bravely.

"I didn't mean to speak that way, Uncle Dicky," she said falteringly. "I beg your pardon."

"I don't know what for, Marion," Dicky said tenderly, with a flash of resentment in his eyes toward Lillian, he adores Lillian's small daughter and spoils her atrociously—but whatever you say goes, so if you want my pardon you can have it on a silver platter. And besides—"

He lowered his voice, bent his head toward hers, and said something rapidly in a low voice that no one else but she could hear, something which made the child's face flush with pleasure and set her eyes to dancing.

"Richard!" Mother Graham's voice betrayed her pique at his daring to give one instant of his attention to anyone beside her grandchild. "Do you realize that the ices have been served? It is time for the cutting of the cakes."

The Rites Accomplished.

If she had been a grandee of a royal court she could have invested an announcement of the crowning of a king with no greater dignity.

her feet, her handkerchief to her eyes.

"Oh! Oh!" she sobbed hysterically. "I can't bear it!" and then she rushed from the room. (To be continued.)

USE SULPHUR TO HEAL YOUR SKIN

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night.

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar from any good drugist and use it like cold cream.—Adv.
