"Go back to the table." she said. "I will attend to this." She sailed out of the door majectically, Lillian spoke softly in my ear:

"She is right," she whispered. There is no other woman at the table with Leila."

I rushed to the girl's side, and put my arms impetuously around "What wonderful news, Leida, dear!" I cried frantically s gnalling the others to back up my el-

A Saving Confession.

"Leila! Sweetheart!" Underneath its frantic tenderness Alfred Durkee's boyish voice held a note I had never heard in it before, a grim, steely inflection which it was well his mother did not hear. "Look at me. know what I think of this damnable business-"

"Don't, don't," the girl whispered pleadingly from the shelter of my shoulder. "I knew-" "Look here, folks," Dicky's voice, cheerfully insouctant. seemed to clear the mental atmosphere, "Let me tell you that you're making a mountain out of darned tiny molehill. The little exhibition that was just staged doesn't mean that Alf's mother disapproves or won't simply on wrapped up in Leila when she gets over the first idea of having her boy married. There is some-thing about that idea which makes a prospect've mother-in-law bite holes in the atmosphere it just naturally affects that way. You should have seen mine when I first broke the news that the lady who now graces the head of the table had consented to make me the happiest man on earth—" He paused to make a grandiloquent bow and throw me a kiss. while I smiled inwardly at this revelation which Dicky had nev-Rainler Drainage District 6 per er made before of Mother Gra-cent bond, No. 38, dated Oct. 1 ham's behavior when he told her of his approaching marriage, although I had guessed it from her attitude toward me in the first months of our marriage.

"And now," Dicky continued, "there's nobody like Madge on the face of the earth for mother. Of course, she rage her sometimes -my mater hasn't my beautiful disposition," he smiled engagingly, "but Madge's the whits-haired girl with mother just the same, Date of last publication, October and I'll wager you four cents that she's out in the hall now reading the riot act to Mrs. Durkee in blissful forgetfulness of the ructions she herself raised once upon a time. So hold up your nead, Leila, and look pleasant, for I'm going to kiss you in about 14 seconds."
