ARTISTS APPRECIATED. By Lillian Jeffries Petri

The concert given by Theo. Karle, tenor, and his assisting artist, Enrique Ros, the Cuban pianist, Tuesday evening at the Grand theater, was a success of the highest artistic order.

Mr. Karle uses his naturally beautiful lyric tenor voice with consummate skill, and even at times with considerable dramatic fervor.

He gave three groups of songs of great variety—showing versatility of style, beside the operatic aria "Glo e Mar," by Puccini, which was the "Piece de Resistance" of the program.

The Russian number, "Over the Steppe," by Greghaninoff, was the most striking number of the first group, to which Mr. Karle was forced by the enthusiasm of the audience, to add a number—"Who Knows," by Stieckler.

The group of Samoan Love Songs proved to be highly colored, full of passion, and very interesting—of the final group the "Au Pays" by Holmes was a remarkable song, remarkably well rendered.

"I'll follow You," by Maly had great charm, and "The Living God" was strikingly effective. Mr. Karle responded graciously with two encores at the end, the first being "Little Mother o' Mine," and the second "The Land of the Sky Blue Water," by Cadman, both record favorites of his. Mr. Karle is one of the most satisfying artists before the public today.

Mr. Ros was in fine form and captivated the audience by the charm and brilliancy, and above all by the sincerity of his performance. He has a predilection for Chopin, for which no one should quarrel with him. Indeed, it was refreshing to hear the good old "stambys" so enthusiastically given and so spontaneously received. Ros has every quality to make his pianism both interesting and satisfying. He has personality; individuality. His obvious love for his instrument puts the listener in close sympathy with his interpretations. Mr. Ros naturally did full justice to the three Cuban dances, which, however, are not pretentious compositions. He gave at the instant demand of the audience The "Minute" waltz, as arranged by Hoffman, the sharp minor waltz, and the "Polonaise Militaire," by Chopin, were given as encores.
