

WASHINGTON GETS BULK OF PRIZES

Coveted Trophies Are Awarded at International Livestock Show

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 9. — Washington today won first of special extension service award Holstein-Friesian herd prizes for the best bunch of 10 selected animals of that breed at the Pacific International Livestock exposition. Oregon took second prize and the third went to Idaho. The rule required that the animals in the competition represent at least five different owners.

Herd awards in the Holstein section today went to the Carnation Farm company. The huge Matador Segia Walker loving cup, put up by Carnation company for the best young herd of Holsteins, was won by J. L. Smith of Spokane.

Carnation won first in the young herd class in which the Segia Matadore Walker cup was offered, but not being in competition on the cup, it was awarded to Smith.

E. A. Stewart, president of the Carnation Farms company, presented the cup, which must be won three times to be held permanently.

In addition to carrying off the first prizes in the four herd classes, the Holsteins, Carnation also won the Oregon Journal cup, for young herd, for the third time and became its permanent possessor. The C. A. Harrison trophies, of

FRANCE HAS CHANGED BUT LITTLE SINCE "DOUGHBOYS" DEPARTED

REMAINS OF THE AMERICAN BASE CAMP AT BREST

From October 30 until November 2 the American Legion held its annual convention in Kansas City. Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium will be represented at the conference. At least twenty Governors from different States throughout the country are expected to attend. American leaders will be represented by General Pershing. A parade will be held, in which 40,000 ex-service men will take part. Many of the boys will exchange glances and greet their "buddies," who many have not seen since they parted three years ago. Many of the ruined villages have been rebuilt, but a great many of them still look the same as when the American lads departed. These pictures will help bring back to mind the days when they were in "the big thing." These pictures, which were taken ten days ago, are an example of what has been done in three famous cities since American troops left France. One shows all that remains of the American Base Camp at Brest, where the majority of American soldiers were killed, and where they were later embarked for home. Another shows the ruins about the City Hall of Chateau Thierry, which has not been built to any great extent. The third shows part of the ruins of Chalons-sur-Marne.

RUINS ABOUT THE CITY HALL IN CHATEAU THIERY

Little has been done to rebuild the village. The "Unknown American Hero," who shall be laid at rest in the Arlington National Cemetery on Armistice Day, was selected from this battlefield.

of his snavy and marine comrades, the unknown was lifted down to the dock. Admiral Chandler and his aides came behind, cocked hats off in the cold rain. The unknown, cabinet members also stood bareheaded, army and navy officers at salute.

Salute of Sea Sounds. As the casket passed over the plank, the wail of the boat's siren shrilled the last salute of the sea to the dead. It sounded oddly against the background of the dirge and as the sound of the pipe died away, the gun forward barked the passing of another minute.

Step by step the bearers labored down the plank to the dock. Again the pipe above wailed as they stepped ashore. The unknown was again on American soil.

Slowly the flag-draped casket moved down between the troops and marines and under the eyes of the bluejackets standing at the ship's rails. As they came abreast of the band, the dirge was stilled, a marine bugler sounded for flourishes of salute to a general officer. The strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" rang out.

Hero of Heroes There. Again the slow march to the waiting gun carriage was taken up; again the wail of the funeral march, cut through with the crash of the gun above, sounded. Beside the casket stood the eight body bearers of the army, headed by Sergeant Woodfill, hero of heroes.

The soldiers took over the burden at the gun carriage and then could be seen a withered handful of flowers, the only decoration on the flag-wrapped casket. They were the blooms with which this casket was chosen from others in France. They will go with the unknown to his last sleep at Arlington. As the casket was strapped in place, an order rang out and the cavalry band swung off to the left, playing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Behind them came the troopers four abreast. After the caisson, and following the squadrons were Secretaries Weeks and Denby, riding in a closed car, General Pershing and Admiral Cointz and behind these other officers.

Thousands Line Road. The horses swung away at a slow trot. Ahead the winding road to the old gateway was lined with marines at present arms, and behind them, row after row, were packed thousands of American citizens.

Out through the gateway the cortege clattered to find other crowds lining the way under the fading daylight. On it went, to swing at last into the great plaza before the capitol, and there the troopers again drew up in line, facing the massive building with sabres at "present" as the casket was carried up the wide stairway to be placed on the catafalque in the dim rotunda. The two secretaries, bareheaded, followed and behind them the officers and the others.

The only lights were those high among the pillars and the last fading gleams of day through the high windows. The waiting guard which would stand through the night about the bier, stood at present arms as the casket was set in place on the high, black-draped structure.

President Arrives. There was a pause then until the ring of a command on the plaza, the flurry of drawn steel as the sabres of the cavalry leaped out to "present" to announce that President and Mrs. Harding had arrived.

As the president and Mrs. Harding came into the chamber, brilliant lights leaped up. The caskets clicked. About the bier the guard stood with rifle butts grounded.

Mrs. Harding stepped forward, a wide white ribbon in her hand. She had stitched it herself, and stepping on the base of the catafalque she laid it across the casket, a slash of white across the rain-sodden flag with its withered cluster of French flowers. Mrs. Harding stepped down, the president pinned to the ribbon a silver shield of the United States, set with 48 golden stars. It is symbolic of the heart of the nation.

Chief Salutes Dead. Then a great wreath of crimson roses was handed Mr. Harding and he laid it on the casket near the head and gave place to Vice President Coolidge and Speaker Gillett who laid the tribute of congress, a wreath of pink roses and snapdragons in place. Chief Justice Taft moved forward bearing the floral tribute of the supreme court, a wreath of chrysanthemums and carnations. Secretary Weeks laid the army's token of remembrance, a wreath of white roses against the casket at the head, and Secretary Denby placed the navy's offering, chrysanthemums and roses, set on an easel at the foot of the bier. Over and to one side, next to the wall, was placed the great masses of pink blossoms that were warmed to life by the sun of France.

Then General Pershing stepped forward to place his own tribute and that of the A. E. F., on the coffin. It was a wreath of giant pink chrysanthemums and as he placed it, the officer paused a moment then stepped back a pace or two and drawing his figure to its full height, lifted his hand to cup brim in rigid salute.

Soldier Left With Guards. The only spectators were the few clustered in the doorways. The bright lights blazed for a few moments as the president and Mrs. Harding went out to receive again formal honors from the troops waiting below.

Then the unknown was left alone with his motionless guard of honor that was changed at frequent intervals, alone with his head eastward toward France on either side of the doorway stand the statues of Lincoln and Grant as though they also kept vigil. And as lights were switched off the dim twilight of the few scattered hidden electric lights let the shadows fall over the bier, and fill the vast cavern of the dome above with a mystery and a peace that will not be broken until daylight of tomorrow.

Season Record Breaker In Crater National Forest

MEDFORD, Ore., Nov. 9. — In point of low number of fires the past season of the Crater national forest was a record-breaking one. There were only 77 fires within the forest confines and two in immediately adjoining state territory protected by the forest service. The total acreage burned over was 8,073.8 acres and the total damage caused amounted to but $763.14. The most important fire, one on the east of Klamath side of the forest, caused a loss of only $112.82.

Of these fires, according to Hugh S. Rankin, supervisor on Crater national forest, 19 were caused by lightning, 49 by carelessness in cigar, pipe or cigarette smoking, or from camp fires left by campers or travelers; 7 were incendiary and one was set by a blasting fuse. The cost of fighting these fires was $2,618.05.

It is all right for Sinclair Lewis to write Main Street, the chief thoroughfare of Gopher Prairie, but why not High Street, an almost universal name in the nomenclature of small towns, where men do things and accomplish something? Another thing is Gopher Prairie only another name for Sauk Center, Minn., where Lewis was born and raised? And whom does he picture as Carol Kennicott?

The young lady across the way dropped into a book store the other day and asked for a copy of Robinson Crusoe. They did not have it in stock.

A CORRECTION

Quality Merchandise truthfully sold is the keynote of our store policy. Our methods of merchandising will be beyond criticism or doubt. These ideals are being instilled into our buyers, our salespeople, and into our organization. Our advertisements are being closely censored.

But in spite of all precaution mistakes will happen, as on September 23, when we advertised Heatherbloom Petticoats at 98c.

We have since found out that this special item so advertised were not the genuine Heatherbloom. We ask our customers who purchased any of these petticoats as genuine Heatherbloom, to let us know and we will cheerfully refund their money. This mistake is very much regretted for it worked an injustice not only to our customers, but to the established reputation of Heatherbloom to our competitors and to ourselves.
