sanatorium of the American household, accompanied by his court of lesser though still important dignitaries.

Though minus his usual plumage and strutting finery, he is a welcomed guest and the family and friends who have gathered around the decorated table to take part in the festive homage, greet his arrival with expectant and happy expressions.

His visit is all too short. One or maybe two brief assaults and the Court of King Turkey is no more. The King departs, leaving behind fond remembrances of his goodness—and many a defeated appetite.

The walnut has always been much in evidence during the Thanksgiving holidays—usually a bowl of them adorning the festive tables after meals.

DIED AT HIS POST. Jack owned a German-made watch. Recently it refused to run so Jack took it to the jeweler.

the verdict his watch was handed to him with a piece of crepe tied to it. "No hope," was the mournful verdict of the jeweler.

"What's the matter?" asked Jack, alarmed. "Found a cockroach inside."

"That's what plugged up the works, eh?" "No," replied the jeweler. "The cockroach had been keeping the thing going, but he died at his post."—London Telegraph.

A Sales Campaign

When the business man says the market is dull he refers to the market where he has been accustomed to sell his products.

Keen business men are always on the alert to find a market beyond their usual territory. Some enterprising stockmen from Massachusetts exhibited at the recent Livestock Show in Portland and thus enlarged their trade area.

There is always a market if you can find it. Many wideawake firms are securing orders from points hundreds of miles beyond their usual territory by use of the Long Distance telephone.

Ask for Pacific Long Distance.
