STATE EXPENSES WILL BE SECURE

Olcott Says Complainants in Extradition Cases Must Put Up Bonds

Because of frequent compromises agreed to by complaining witnesses, or failure to prosecute in cases of persons extradited from other states to Oregon on charges of obtaining money by false pretenses, Governor Olcott has determined that complaining witnesses must file with the district attorneys cash or bond to reimburse the state in event of no prosecution.

The policy is enunciated in a letter sent by the executive to all district attorneys of the state. If the bond or cash is not placed with the prosecutor applications for requisitions will not be granted.

"A number of instances have come to my observation wherein requests have been made for the extradition and return of this state of fugitives upon the alleged offense of obtaining money by false pretenses through the use of fictitious or worthless checks and that upon the return of such fugitives the prosecuting witness has compromised the case and criminal action has been stopped," says the letter. "This places the state in the position of being a collection agency and of going to a large expense in returning men for the simple purpose of collecting a private debt.

"I have determined in the future in all such cases before I will honor such applications for the return of a fugitive from another state that the prosecuting witness must place with the district attorney of the county from which the application is made, a suitable bond approved by such district attorney, or cash, for an amount sufficient to cover all expenses in connection with the return of such fugitive. In event a compromise is effected whereby the defendant escapes prosecution through payment of the amount of the check or otherwise to the prosecuting witness the state is then to be reimbursed all of its expense through the bond or cash required by the district attorney.

getting already prevails, I believe, in some counties. I think this move will be in the nature of a protection to the counties as well as to the state itself."

Mabel Garrison Sings In Salem December 5

In the Chicago Journal we read, "Whenever her voice soared out above the tonal mass of the orchestra it was as if a few extra lights had been turned on on the stage." And Mr. Well in the New York Journal declares without reserve, "Miss Garrison is unsurpassed by anyone else at present singing in this country." It is unnecessary to say that when Miss Garrison appears here on Monday, December 5, we expect to hear a program of rare charm given with exquisite art and voice. Miss Garrison comes as the last concert attraction in the fine series of recitals arranged by The Salem Musical Bureau. She is giving several concerts in addition to her duties at the Metropolitan opera in New York where she has sung for four seasons.

Miss Garrison has been elevated to a position never before occupied by an American soprano and is now the leading coloratura singer of the Metropolitan Opera company. She certainly has earned the place most coveted by brilliant sopranos. Two seasons ago at barely one day's notice she stepped into the role of the Queen of the Night in "The Magic Flute," and carried off the honors in beautiful style. Last season her singing of Lucia created a sensation, and the powers that be at the Metropolitan were doubly sure that this young American artist need fear no foreign competition.

A fine musical memory is a priceless asset to a singer, and in this respect Mabel Garrison is remarkably blessed. The famous American soprano has no difficulty in studying and memorizing new songs and arias while traveling on trains if need be, and where most singers are completely at sea without a piano to help them through unfamiliar music, Miss Garrison reads such complicated things as orchestral scores with no apparent difficulty. A few seasons ago, called upon at short notice to sing five choral works with the Chicago Symphony orchestra she learned and sang the soprano parts in less than a week while on tour with the orchestra.—Adv.
