HISTORIC RHEIMS CATHEDRAL NOW BEING RESTORED BY EXPERT WORKMEN

The historic Rheims Cathedral, which was partly laid to ruins when German troops bombarded the city, is now being restored by expert workmen. Utmost care is being taken in renovating the edifice, which is one of the most beautiful pieces of architecture in the world. While the work of restoration is slow and tedious, great progress is being made, as these pictures will vouch for. One of the photographs shows workmen removing the debris in the interior of the building, while the other shows how the exterior of the cathedral looks to-day.

bers When Vicinity Was Hunter's Paradise

A string of wild ducks, two dozen of 'em, in front of Anderson & Brown's, that were killed in ome of the ponds over in Połk ounty Sunday, are the text on which Doscoe Shelton, deputy assessor, hangs an interesting tale.

"Things are not as they used to be in Oregon," was Mr. Shelton's comment. "There was a time, in my boyhood, when you could take a gun and go out and get the limit of birds almost in the city limits of Salem. They used to come in droves, almost up to the capitol, and you fairly had to shoot 'em to save the women earlier days of good eyesight and and children. Over in West Salem, or rather where West Salem now is, more Chinas could be picked up in an hour than most men ever see in these days. There was only one house on the whole flat in those days, and the birds didn't care a hoot for that.

"A party of us used to have a boat that we'd put on a wagon and go up to Mehama, where we'd take the water and float down sometimes clear to Salem. We used to count it about the same as shoveling sand or going to pail or eating at the third table on Christmas or Thanksgiving, if we didn't get at least 150 fish on the way the duck season. Nowadays, if one were to find an empty duck feather off a girl's last year's hat, or catch maybe a dozen or 20 dyspeptic fish, it would be a successful trip for those to whom even a picture of a wild prairie dog

Deputy Assessor Remem- bayous running down from the end of the bridge on the Polk county side, were the most wonderful duck preserves you ever saw. You could almost go out there, pick out the fattest duck by tickling him in the ribs, and wring als neck with one hand while with the other hand you fought off the other ducks that wanted you to take them too. Hunting was a bird of a sport in those happy days. Hunting and fishing today are not fair ghosts of what they used to be. Mr. Shelton was a professional gun man, for a number of years, traveling for the Remington company to demonstrate their products. He has an old Grag military rifle that has fired 10,000 shots and is still in good shooting order; and other guns from the down; or a boatload of ducks in a suptle waistline. The county gained a mighty good accountant when he gave up the gun shooting game and settled down to troubleshooting on the books with a pencil instead of a trigger on his finger. But still he sighs for the gamey old days.
