

HIGH HOOPSTERS BEAT FRESHMEN

Extra Period Necessary to Break Tie in Sensational Preliminary

Using three complete changes of lineup and playing an extra five-minute period in order to break a 14-16 tie, the red and black quintet of the high school last night captured its initial game of the season by an 18 to 17 score when it defeated the Willamette freshman team in a preliminary game to the Willamette-Whitman battle.

Enthusiasm ran highest at the very end of the game when the hoopsmen blew the whistle just as McKinney, star Willamette player, started to shoot a foul which if successful would have tied the score and given the freshman team another chance in another extra period. McKinney was permitted to make the throw but failed to convert the point.

Sensational playing of the part of the second team in which Harold Socolofsky, Lillegren and Tucker figured large was the chief feature of the game. The second string was sent in shortly after the middle of the first half after the first team had put up a hard fight and with the score almost even. It was composed of Oberberg, Harold Socolofsky, Tucker, Lillegren and Petrum, all of whom made good showings and at the end of the first half they had held the score down to 9 to 7.

The temporary first team which started the game last night, composed of Brown, Rinehart, Adolph, Thompson and Patterson, was greatly hampered at the first of the game by inaccurate passing, but warmed up to a more smooth working machine after the first 10 minutes. The team showed good organization and team work and the defects of their playing were mostly minor rough points which can easily be smoothed off with more practice.

The third team, composed of Lennon, Post, Davidson, Herbert Socolofsky and Albers, went in at the beginning of the second half and although they did not show the skill that the first two teams had shown they made up in hard playing the skill which they lacked. A large number of fouls amassing a substantial lead for the Willamette team soon necessitated a change and the first team was again put on the floor. This team was hardly more successful and they were replaced in the last part of the second half by the second squad.

In the last seven minutes and in the extra five minute period the second team succeeded in overcoming a lead of five points and in tallying the one extra which meant victory for the high school squad. Harold Socolofsky was successful with his foul throws and Lillegren and Socolofsky both played a fine game at guard. Lillegren was in a league measure responsible for the victory because of his airtight guarding. Tucker did star work as a forward and in converting difficult shots.

In the Willamette squad, McKinney played a stellar game, winning 15 of the 17 points for the green cap team. Baggott did excellent guard work. McKinney and Morehead played the forward positions, Schriber the center circle, and Baggott and Emma, the guard berths.

Coch Sparks of the high school said last night that he had made no decision as to the permanent lineup for the season but that it might be announced within a few days. In the game last night he started Brown and Rinehart in the forward berths; Adolph at center, and Thompson, temporary captain, and Patterson at guard.

QUESTIONS UNTANGLED IN PEACE PARLEY

Opposed to this is the view that to convert discarded battleships into another type of war vessel would not be in accord with the animating purpose of the Washington conference.

This position is understood to have been taken in the "big five" meetings by Secretary Hughes. To support it the argument was made that the conference should demonstrate its desire to reduce armaments by specifying that the surplus ships must be put out of business altogether.

Geography at Issue

The question of defining the geographical scope of the Pacific fortifications article was described in authoritative circles today as largely a matter of finding the proper technical terminology to carry out decisions already reached.

Originally the fortifications agreement provided that no island legitimately within the "homeland" of the United States or Japan should be affected by the treaty but that on all other islands in the region of the Pacific, fortifications should be kept in their present status. When they came to details, however, the plenipotentiaries found that the Bonin islands were held by Japan to be a part of the Japanese "homeland," although the Japanese had no objections to extending the "status quo" agreement so as to include the Bonin group.

In consequence, an attempt is now in progress to find a way to bring the group within the scope of the fortifications article without, at the same time, classifying it as outside the Japanese "homeland."

The present proposal is to attach to the treaty a map, with lines drawn to indicate in precisely what zone the "status quo" is to apply.

Japan's Objection Obstacle

A spokesman for the American delegation today gave the impression that the United States had reached no final decision regarding China's request for conference discussion of the "21 demands," although some of the American delegation members are known to be strongly of the opinion that the subject cannot be debated in view of Japan's objection. Data for use in the Siberian negotiations is also being made ready for the delegations.

The nature of the compromise suggestions made by Secretary Hughes and Mr. Balfour for settlement of the Shantung railroad problem, although closely guarded, are known to contain some measure of Japanese participation in management of the road during the period given China to make payment for the property. Pending word from their capital, the Chinese and Japanese both are reserving judgment regarding the suggestions.

Harding Watching Closely

In high official quarters there have been indications that the American government regards the Shantung question as one which should be settled to insure proper relations in the Far East, and it is known that President Harding has kept himself closely informed of developments in the negotiations. It would not surprise some of those in close touch with the question if some proposition for mediation by the president came out of the Hughes-Balfour compromise movement.

NEWBERRY TO KEEP SEAT IN SENATE

mands that he be "voted out or in" on a clear cut issue.

Adjournment Till Monday

The end of the Newberry controversy came at 6:28 p. m. and the senators, exhausted from the strain of the battle which had been waged unceasingly on the floor and under the surface for days, quit work until Monday.

The final vote was taken after a day of combat unlike any in recent months and after the Democrats and the nine Republicans had made strenuous efforts to upset the program of the Newberry supporters. Three resolutions each declaring the seat vacant, were lined up by exactly the same lineup which established Mr. Newberry's title to his seat. The resolutions were those of Senators Walsh of Montana and Owen of Oklahoma, Democrats and Norris of Nebraska, Republican.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, president pro tempore, then began to put the question which was to decide the controversy, but Senator LaFollette, Republican of Wisconsin, interrupting him, rose and addressed the chair. He lashed a barrage of denunciation of the stand of his party colleagues were about to take and made a lengthy comparison of the Newberry case with that of the ousting of former Senator Lorimer of Illinois and contended the comparison was favorable to Mr. Lorimer.

LaFollette Severe

"The question and the only question here," Mr. LaFollette declared dramatically, "is whether a seat in the United States senate can be bought for a quarter of a million or for half a million dollars."

The change in the form of the majority resolution came just before the voting began. Senator

Willis, Republican of Ohio, offered, and Senator Spencer, Republican of Missouri, in charge of the Newberry forces, accepted the proposal for a severe condemnation of the use of large funds as a substitute for the original clause declaring that the charges against Mr. Newberry were unfounded.

Democratic leaders contended that the charge was made to secure a few more votes for Mr. Newberry.

The Willis amendment immediately was subjected to hot fire by Republican and Democratic opponents of the senator. It was defended by Senators Spencer and Willis, and went into the final resolution without a record vote.

Until the final vote was announced spectators thronged the galleries, often overflowing into the halls, while many house members stood about the senate chamber.

Senator Newberry did not attend the session, but members of his family were among the spectators in the galleries, together with representatives of Mr. Ford.

Adjournment was taken after Walter Rathenau, German financial expert had finished addressing the council and no action or comment was made upon his remarks concerning Germany's default of her January reparations payment.

The council will hold an informal meeting tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock probably meeting for the last time. The members of the reparations commission will not be present, nor will the Germans be heard.

M. Laroche, assistant director of the political section of the foreign office, will represent France. He has received instructions from M. Briand to act as observer and not to take part in the discussions.
