

By MARGUERITE GLEESON

DRAMATIZATIONS of stories from their readers will be among the features of the school work put on by the school children at the Salem Women's club program Saturday. Two forms of dramatization will be demonstrated by the boys and girls who will represent the 4th, 5th and 6th grades.

"The Hour Story," written by Willis Bugbee, will be given to show how memorization is used in dramatizing, while "A Feast" will be presented to illustrate the dramatizing of a story from the reader with memorizing.

The social committee who will be in charge of the social hour Saturday is composed of Mrs. A. J. Rahn, Mrs. Otto Wisda, Mrs. E. T. Busselle, Mrs. H. V. Compton and Miss Ada Miller.

An oriental tea will be given January 26 by the Women's club for the benefit of the scholarship loan. The date has been changed from January 25 because of another meeting to be held that day in the Commercial club rooms.

the rooms and on the table. The hostess was assisted in serving by Mrs. Lee Gilbert. Mrs. Gilbert will be hostess to the club at the next meeting.

Mrs. Grant Pirle of Albany spent a few days in Salem this week. She attended the ceremonies of the White Shrine of Jerusalem.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Waters returned this week from a visit at The Dalles.

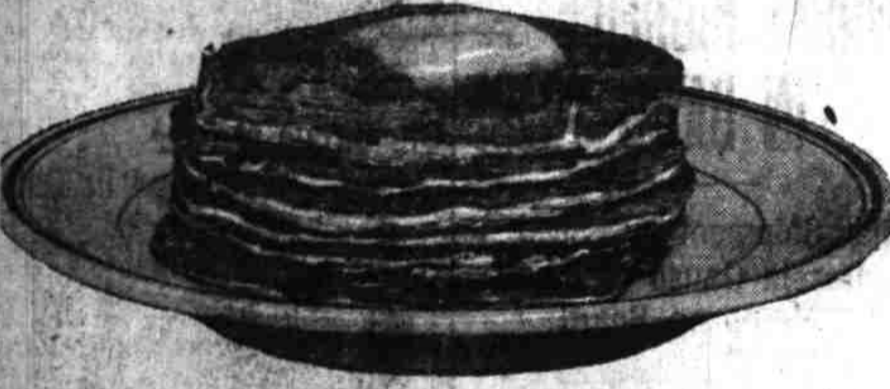

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Barr of Eugene spent a few days this week as guests of Mrs. E. S. McElnea.

The Daughters of Isabella will meet this afternoon with Mrs. James Heenan at sew for the Associated Charities. The organization plans to meet each Friday to sew for this purpose.

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

Chapter 270

WHY DICKY ASKED MADGE A SURPRISING QUESTION

Dicky's curt words, so different from the greeting I had been picturing to myself as I rushed to the station, chilled me as thoroughly as if he had chosen to dash a bucket of cold water over me. Using the common sense which since my husband's return from the war I have been trying to inject into my relations with him, I had firmly pushed into the back of my mind the words of Harry Underwood's that had so troubled me:

"The Dicky-bird's not playing the game with you," and had resolved that I would never refer to them, never even think of them again. But my husband's unexpected rudeness not only aroused my temper, but summoned from the depths where I thought I had buried it the ugly suspicion which for a little I had harbored.

With wifely intuition I knew exactly how I could most quickly exasperate Dicky, and with my temper near the boiling point—but my mental thermometer carefully concealed—I set to work.

"Really, Dicky," I drawled, smilingly, that is a long story, too long for the telling now, especially as I don't suppose you care for an audience. Several of you fellow-passengers appear to be unduly interested in us as it is. Don't you think you'd better—"

"Blast it!" Dicky interrupted under his breath, throwing his suitcase into the tonneau as he spoke, and seating himself beside me. "Get out of this—quick."

A "Silky" Question.

He had cast one furtive glance around, had seen as I had, that several of the idlers at the station were watching us with open curiosity and smiles which they took no trouble to disguise. I was fairly trembling with humiliation and anger, but with a mighty effort I kept the bored smile on my face that I had put there when I first spoke to him.

I didn't speak until we had turned the corner from the station and were headed for the culvert beneath the tracks. I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Teer hurrying up the path away from the corner where I had left her, guessed that at her first sight of the machine she had left her post in order that I need not feel obliged to stop and introduce Dicky to her, and blessed whatever astral body it was which had so ordained her movements. It was no time for social pleasantries.

"Do you wish to drive?" I asked silkily as I guided the car under the culvert, always a dangerous proceeding, because of the narrow place in which machines are compelled to pass each other. I all ways vigorously sounded the calliope horn I had purchased whenever I went under it, and upon this particular occasion I gave it one or two extra blasts, guessing that Dicky would disapprove.

"My Very Own."

"Drive this fillyer? Not on your golden wedding day," he retorted contemptuously. "And for the love of Mike cut out that fireboat siren of course, everybody within 50 miles must have you spotted for a rank amateur by this time, but wait till I can get out of this before you mix me up with it."

Heroically I repressed the inclination to ask him if he would prefer walking back to the station and getting a taxi out. I knew him well enough to be certain that he would act upon the suggestion at once, and improve upon it by returning to the city upon the next train. So I contented myself by remarking calmly:

"The best driver I ever have known says that all motor car drivers are amateurs except the few who race in those big contests."

I felt rather than saw my husband twist in his seat, and knew that his eyes were fixed with suspicious inquiry upon my face.

"The best driver you have ever known," he repeated with a mocking laugh that I knew was forced. "I suppose you're an accomplished judge of drivers by this time. Strange the newspapers aren't after you to write their automobile columns. May I ask who this paragon is?"

"I don't think his name would interest you," I said demurely. "You do not know him very well, and I have heard you speak with distinct disapproval of him many times, so why talk of unpleasant things. Isn't the coloring of those clouds beautiful?"

Dicky expressed his opinion of the clouds and the surrounding country with emphatic and somewhat picturesque eloquence. Then he shot forth another insistent query:

"Where did you get this blasted car? It looks too new to be a rented one."

"It is my own, my very own."

Dicky made a quick movement toward me. I think he had meant to seize my arm, and remembered just in time that I was driving. Even the movement made me lose control long enough to let the car swerve rockingly to one side. But I righted it quickly and the effort enabled me to listen calmly to the astounding question which Dicky next asked.

"Look here!" he said with black fury. "Did that pap, Grantland, dare to teach you to drive?"

Lumber Production Still Far Short of Normal Mark

One hundred and thirty-three mills reporting to West Coast Lumbermen's association for the week ending January 7, manufactured 66,187,169 feet of lumber; sold 48,434,919 feet; and shipped 59,174,397.

Production was 26 per cent below normal; new business was 27 per cent above production; and shipments 10 per cent above production.

Forty-two per cent of all new business taken during the week was accepted for future water delivery. This amounted to 24,234,919 feet, of which 9,395,717 feet will move overseas, and 10,839,002 feet will move overland. New business for delivery by rail totaled 940 cars.

Forty per cent of the week's shipments moved by water, totaling 23,744,397 feet, of which 15,550,525 feet moved coastwise and intercoastal, and 8,193,872 feet export. The rail movement for the week was 1,181 cars.

The unshipped balance in the domestic cargo trade totaled 93,634,943 feet; and in the export trade 101,883,327 feet. In the rail trade the unshipped balance amounted to 3,995 cars.
