

M. POINCARE MAKES START

New Premier of France Wins Point in Conversation With Lloyd George

BRITONS DISAPPOINTED

Head of English Ministry Unable to Arrange Meeting With Millerand

PARIS, Jan. 14. (By the Associated Press).—M. Poincare, who has accepted the premiership to succeed M. Briand and expects to have his cabinet completed tomorrow, engaged in a lengthy conversation today with the British premier. What conclusion was reached is not known, but M. Poincare, in a statement, declared that "international questions henceforth will be settled as heretofore, through ambassadors."

This, in the expressed opinion of the premier designate, would mean virtual disappearance of the supreme council, though he added "there must be one final meeting should the French viewpoint prevail and I have good reasons to believe it will so far as Great Britain is concerned." He thought there had been too many meetings of the supreme council and he desired a return to the old-fashioned way of dealing.

Poincare Has Triumph

The conference turned out to be quite a success for the new premier, according to the French view, as he apparently convinced Mr. Lloyd George that it would be construed by the French nation as unfortunate and by himself as inimical to him personally should Mr. Lloyd George meet ex-premier Briand and Dr. Rathenau, German representative.

In consequence M. Briand's visit to the British embassy was merely a social function during which he had a brief informal talk with the British premier. Mr. Lloyd George did not meet the Germans.

The British premier came here with ratification of the policy of a moratorium for Germany tentatively granted by the reparations commission, but met with strong opposition from M. Poincare, who argued that Germany had not paid to the limit of her capacity and that some means must be found for lightening France's burden.

Meeting is Deferred

The conclusion in Belgian circles, which have rallied to the British and Italian views, is that France stands alone on the reparation problems.

Mr. Lloyd George had notified the Elysee palace that he would like to call on President Millerand but the latter had an engagement and suggested an hour which was the time when the premier was conferring with M. Poincare. It was said by the British delegation that Mr. Lloyd George did not call at Elysee palace as custom requires the invitation. The official explanation was that the protocol provides for visits from the heads of foreign states on invitation.

Disappointment Manifest

British circles do not conceal their disappointment over the failure of Mr. Lloyd George to meet President Millerand. However, he received Premier Theunys and Foreign Minister Jaspas of Belgium and also M. De Lasteyrie, who is slated for the ministry of finance in the Poincare cabinet, concerning the central international corporation, officially adopted by the Cannes conference to which M. Poincare is said to agree.

The Belgian and German delegates were anxious to hear the result of the Lloyd George-Poincare discussions and received confidential information, which was greeted by the Germans with apparent satisfaction, while the Belgians appeared to be somewhat concerned.

Ethical and Unethical

Being a continuation of my preceding messages. "Why Do I Advertise?" "What I Advertise?" "Is My Policy Right?" "Do You Know This Fact?" and "Should a Person Be Penalized For Rendering a Public Service?"

They say I am "unethical." Let's see what the dictionary says about ethics:

Ethics. The science or doctrine of the sources, principles, sanctions and ideals of human conduct and character; the science of the morally right.

That's a mouthful all right. But note the words "ideals of human conduct and character," and "the morally right." Do you think my conduct squares up with that definition when, as a result of my efforts, thousands of people are made happier and healthier—people who would not otherwise know the benefits and blessings of good teeth?

Every dentist knows that 77 per cent of the people have seldom or never sat in a dentist's chair, either because they don't know enough or are afraid.

If honest dental advertising backed up by honest dentistry is helping to correct this appalling state of affairs, isn't it more nearly "ethical"—according to the definition above—than the silent "dignity" and do-nothing attitude of the so-called "ethical" dentists?

I leave it to you.

I don't claim to be a philanthropist. But my educational advertising is benefiting thousands of people and so I am happy in the thought that I am able to render a public service while earning my livelihood.

Yet, because I am trying to do single-handed what the profession as a whole should be doing, I am the inspiration for all sorts of obstructive laws and regulations fostered by dental associations and boards.

What do you think about it?

ICE COAT ON VESSEL IS PICTURESQUE

The fishing schooner Dawn, which traverses the waters surrounding Newfoundland, carried thousands of pounds of ice on her rigging and deck when she reached her port in Boston. Rays of sunlight shining upon the frozen salt sea water made a picturesque scene as she lay in her berth. It took hours before the crew of the vessel could chop the ice away.

for a week or two is not worth the cost of one of Dicky's rages, especially since I have learned to gauge them at their true value.

The week following his wrath at the discovery that I had learned to drive was no exception to his usual rule. He was so overwhelmingly considerate of my every wish when we had reached the shack that I saw Lillian flash a quick, quizzical, understanding glance at him, a glance which I by chance intercepted, and which made me smile in spite of myself.

"Did I tell you once that you must learn how to manage the Dicky-bird?" she demanded whimsically the first chance she had to speak to me out of Dicky's hearing. "Well, you've certainly graduated! You've got him eating out of your hand. But don't let up on the process. A course of sprouts is good for him."

I knew that if I had not caught her glance and smiled at her she would never have referred to the subject. It is never her way to comment upon another's affairs or to give unasked advice. And I realized by a stressed note underneath her levity that she was anxious lest because of my great love for Dicky I should again permit him the domination of the first year of our married life, and repeat the unhappiness which that policy had brought me.

But I could not discuss my husband even with this trust of friends to us both unless it were to avert disaster. So I simply suggested her understandingly, laughed lightly, and went back to the screened porch and Dicky.

He had brought me news that made me decide to shorten my outing by a couple of days.

"Met old Jack Hickett on the street yesterday," he said, as he stretched lazily in a couch hammock, his hands behind his head, while his eyes roved over the panorama of sky and woods and dancing water that spread before us.

"How is—Katherine?" I substituted my little friend's name for my brother-cousin's hastily, although it was he, not she, who had been ailing. But, staunch friends as Dicky and Jack now are, I could not forget the time when my brother-cousin's name was as potent to arouse my husband's jealous anger as Maj. Grantland's seemed to be now.

Dicky's "Report":

"Very adroitly done, my dear." Dicky grinned maliciously yet with perfect good humor at me. "But you needn't have hedged. I promise not to bite any chunks out of the air if you ask after your cousin's health. And to show you what an obliging cuss I am I'll answer both your spoken question and the one you cr-u-shed back from your lips."

He grinned again and I wished that I had been quicker-witted. It would have been much better to have done the obviously natural thing, asked first after my ailing cousin, and by so doing it appear that I had completely forgotten that old beetle time.

"Katherine isn't very well, Jack says," Dicky spoke with provoking slowness, puffing luxuriously at a cigar between sentences. "Imagine she's had rather a strenuous time of it with him, a nervous invalid isn't the easiest thing in the world to handle, and with all due respect to your cousin I imagine he hasn't the easy-going, sweet lamb-like temperament possessed by your husband, for instance."

"Jack's like the little girl with the little curl on her forehead." I returned, trying to speak naturally. "When he doesn't have one of his mopy fits on he's very, very good, but—"

"I should imagine that when he takes one of those high and mighty grouches of his he could make it most disagreeable for a loving wife," Dicky interrupted. "He's always so absolutely right, isn't he? All his actions actuated by the highest ideals and overwhelming sense of duty?"

I smiled in spite of myself. The description was grossly overdrawn, yet it had more than a little truth in it.

"I ought to go to see Katherine if she isn't well," I interposed hastily. I didn't wish to comment upon Dicky's description.

A Sudden Resolution.

"You'll have to do it pronto, then," he retorted. "Jack, who incidentally is much better, has had a wonderful opportunity offered him in a western state, some engineering project gone flat that they want his help on. Guess he's tired of trying to live on his income, which couldn't have been anything to speak of. At any

SALEM HEIGHTS CLUB ELECTS

New Officers Chosen for Community Club in Live Local District

The Salem Heights Improvement league met Friday evening and held their annual election of officers. Fred Thompson was elected president; E. Latourelle, vice president; Robert D. Hulsey, treasurer.

Harry Burnside is the new member of the board of control, the hold-overs are Mrs. A. E. Battles and W. C. Caldwell.

Committees were appointed to help carry on the work for the coming year. The new officers indicate that this year will be one of great progress for the league.

Reports from the different divisions of the club brought out especially the fact that many things have been accomplished in the past year. Some good lively programs are on the calendar which should awake the interest of some who have not attended recently.

A. M. Chapman, who has been president for the past two years was a very enthusiastic and progressive executive. Mr. Chapman has shown himself to be capable and the community appreciate his efforts.

The Salem Heights Improvement league is recognized throughout the state as being a leader in community affairs and of course everyone is proud of that fact and they are going to maintain that standard of efficiency.
