The Well Dressed Woman

By AGNES AYRES. Star in Paramount Pictures.

I defy any mere man to tell at a glance when a costume consists of a blouse and skirt and when it does not—or many women, either. Of course, there are one piece dresses that are unmistakable, and there are blouses and skirts on which you cannot go wrong, but the majority of the new costume blouses are made with intent to deceive.

All of them come becomingly over the waist line, and some are long enough to give the effect of a tunic frock, your suit skirt serving as an underskirt and showing only for a few inches above the ankle.

It is a splendid fashion, making the three piece suit possible for restaurant wear and even for very informal evening occasions.

In this latter class is the French blouse in the sketch. The tunic is of coarse mesh black lace and made over a short blouse of ivory satin. There is a picturesque and very smart collar of seal, the large sleeves have seal cuffs and the hem of the tunic is weighted with the same fur.

There are inexpensive satin skirts to be worn with these blouses, when not combined with a jacket suit.

Some of the blouses are of velvet, very simply made as suits the material, others of taffeta or satin, and still others of silk, combined with self-color lace for evening wear. Embroidery and beading are not so much used on the long as on the short blouses, and, of course, where beads are used they are either jet or steel. Steel is the season's prime favorite and is used in beads from the size of a pin to a half bead, the tiny beads giving an almost ethereally light effect that one would never associate with steel.

Portland for the celebration. Chapter G from Salem attended last year. Just how the local group will take part in the affair this year has not been decided yet but will be considered at the regular meeting of the organization Thursday. Mrs. John J. Evans will be hostess at this meeting.

The Portland chapters of the P. E. O. are organizing a women's chorus which will be directed by Paul Petri, who directed the Salem Women's club chorus last fall. It is hoped to organize a chorus of 35 voices. The women will sing at the state convention of the P. E. O. which will meet in Portland in May.

The C. M. club will entertain with a card party at the home of Mrs. T. M. Barr January 26.

Mrs. Lizzie Smith was chosen president of the Women's Relief Corp. ad society at the meeting last week. Other officers chosen were Mrs. Helen Southwick, vice president; Mrs. Louise King, treasurer; and Mrs. Norma Terwilliger, secretary.

SEEK FRIENDS. IN HOUR OF NEED

"In the hour of need we quickly seek our best friends," writes Chas. Schridt Ward de Wet, 957 73rd Ave., Oakland, Cal., "our little boy and girl had a severe dry, rasping cough without phlegm, a cough that chokes and flushes the face of the sufferer like unto convulsions. Foley's Honey and Tar was a wonderful emergency remedy." Cases like this give Foley's Honey and Tar its reputation as the best remedy for coughs and colds. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

MRS. W. H. LEEDS PASSES BEYOND

Widow of Former State Printer Succumbs at Los Angeles, Calif.

The many Salem friends of Mrs. Nettie W. Leeds, widow of W. H. Leeds, will be deeply grieved to learn of her death which occurred at Los Angeles just before midnight on Saturday, Jan. 11. Mrs. Leeds had been in failing health since the death of her husband which occurred at Ashland a few months ago while on a visit to the old home, and her disease baffled the skill of the best physicians.

Prior to her marriage to W. H. Leeds she was Nettie Wagner, the daughter of a pioneer family of Ashland, where her brother and other members of her family still reside, and where she lived until her husband was elected state printer in 1894 when she moved to Salem and lived here until the end of his second term, July 1, 1902, when the family moved to California on account of his health.

While in Salem Mr. and Mrs. Leeds made many very warm friends who will be deeply grieved to know of her passing away.

Mrs. Leeds leaves to mourn her loss three sons, Howard, an electrical engineer of Los Angeles, Albert, a lawyer who is just opening an office in San Francisco, and Barclay who is a student at Stanford university.

The funeral will be held at Ashland, and the remains will be laid to rest beside those of her late husband.

First Permits Issued Under Motor Line Act

The first permits to operate under the new statute placing motor vehicle lines under the jurisdiction of the public service commission were issued by the commission yesterday. They were granted to the Portland-Newberg Stage company and to the Portland-Hillsboro-McMinnville Stage line.

The conference between David Lloyd George and Premier Briand is still in progress. It requires a long time for the Frenchman to borrow a dollar of the wily Welshman.—Exchange.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of the old famous Sage Tea recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance.

LIBRARY NOTES FOR THRIFT WEEK

Monday
Benjamin Franklin Day
The thrifty man or woman must read for thrift mean economic advancement and the person who does not keep in touch with what others in his profession are thinking and doing is lost in the race. Therefore, a complete list of thrift books would, of necessity, include the last word in every line of business. In the books which the Public Library will suggest from day to day during Thrift week, only those will be listed which make a general appeal to all who would practice thrift in their financial relations.

It is well to begin our thought of thrift with a study of our model in this regard, Benjamin Franklin. His "Autobiography" should have a place in every home library, especially the new edition illustrated so attractively by Boyd Smith.

"How to Save Money," Nathaniel Foyler discusses briefly some sins of importance and the ways to cure them. He gives sound advice on how to save and to invest money, for those who are not familiar with financial operations.

Bojton Hall in his book "Thrift" deals with such practical subjects as "Personal Efficiency," "Saving Time," "Economic Economizing," "Wasted Time and Wasted Land" and "Thrift in Wastes."

Orison Sweet Marden in his book of the same title discusses "A Safeguard for the Future," "The Art of Saving is the Art of Wise Spending," "The Ruin of Idleness," "Spendthrifts of Time and Energy."

Wednesday
Budget day books:
The leakages in the family purse may be stopped, according to C. M. Taber, by means of the little systematic attention to the family budget. His book "Business of the Household" is full of practical suggestions on the apportionment of the family income, the standards of expenditure, home ownership, the buying of food for the family and all of the other financial problems common to American homes.

If a little business needs a budget, a big business involving $2,000,000,000 expenditures a year needs it much more. It is this idea which is the excuse for Edward A. Fitzpatrick's "Budget Making in a Democracy." He considers the budget a social problem, and the problem of formulating it, society's prerogative.

Thursday
Life Insurance day:
"How to Buy Life Insurance," by Q. P. White not a new book, contains thoughtful advice for arriving and careful explanation for the uninitiated of the technicalities of the subject. A newer and more thorough treatment of the subject is Huebner's "Life Insurance."

Friday
Books for Own-Your-Own-Home day:
"Homes for Workmen," contains chapters of "the best house for the small wage-earner," "building fire-safe frame buildings" and "methods of economy in housing construction," as well as chapters specifically concerning industrial housing. It is amply illustrated with plans and pictures of inexpensive houses. The Southern Pine association publishes the book.

The special work to be done on the small place and the results to be enjoyed are arranged month by month in St. Maur's "Self-supporting Home." His suggestions are applicable to the small farm and for the large lot or suburban home.

Saturday
Books for Pay-Your-Bills- Promptly day:
The books listed today cover a broader field of business relationship than the day's name indicated.

"A dime a day would pay your fare, second class, to Europe and back in three years," is one of the pithy suggestions on saving in Albert Atwood's "How to Get Ahead." He discusses how to make money work, taking a bank account into partnership, the best insurance policy, investing in a small way and other such practical topics.

The purpose of "Graphic Methods for Presenting Facts," by Willard C. Brinton is to suggest ways in which comparisons may be pictured or charted realistically. Its connection with thrift is that the comparisons it will develop must prove thought-provoking and perhaps revolutionizing in business management.

"Accounting and Business Practice," by Moore and "What Every Business Woman Should Know," by Kearney, are worthy of attention on the subjects their titles indicate.

Sunday
Share-With-Others day books:
The effort to help some people to give more intelligently and happily or to lend their influence more effectively to advance the cause of human welfare in our country is Elwood Street's stated purpose in writing his little book on "Sympathy and System in Giving." He describes the various classes which need help and the ways to help without pauperizing them.

"Money, the Acid Test," is a group of studies on stewardship intended especially for the church member, whether young or old. His suggestions are no less applicable to every giver for others, and that should include us all.

"Put God in Your Budget" is the striking title of an article by Association Men for January. This number is full of articles on thrift subjects, such as: "Time is Money—Invest It," and "Measuring Men by the Iron Test of Economy."

"Religion and Business," by Roger Babson is a good Sunday suggestion for a business man at any time.

These books may be borrowed from the public library.

Monday
A Book for Make-a-Will day:
Arthur Bakemore, in his "Make Your Will," describes in detail how special provisions are to be incorporated into a will, and how specific requirements are to be met. An appendix reviews the laws of the various states affecting wills. The book is written for the general reader. It may be borrowed from the public library.

Notable Will Case Will Be Heard on Wednesday

The will case of Strong vs Smith, involving two wills of the late Mrs. Xarifa J. Faling of Portland, will be argued in the supreme court Wednesday of this week. The estate of Mrs. Faling is valued at about $750,000. The question relates to which of the two wills shall stand.

What would we do without the census bureau? It finds that the size of the American family is being gradually reduced. This will be a scoop on the father who pays the bills—they are as large as ever.

Further Interpretation Put on Compensation Act

Protection of the workmen's compensation act can legally be extended to workmen engaged in building construction for a religious organization, even though the workmen donate their services according to an opinion of Attorney General an Winkle. The opinion is written in reply to an inquiry by the state industrial accident commission.

The contribution to be paid to the accident fund, it is held, should be based upon the assumption that the workmen are earning a daily wage at the going rate for similar work.

"Thank You"

This acknowledgment of a courtesy or service is somehow the satisfactory end of a transaction. Both parties are pleased and the relations of the moment, however unimportant, are more happily closed.

There is no occasion when an effort made for the comfort or convenience of others is not worth a "thank you."

In the daily routine of telephone operations, where the saving of time is the great consideration, the opportunity of expressing an appreciation of a service rendered seldom arises.

But remember that the telephone operator is human. Courtesy to her means more cheerfulness in her work. It will be reflected in your own self-satisfaction.
