Law and Order Sunday Is Set Apart in State

Next Sunday, January 22, will be observed in Oregon as law and order Sunday, and will be so recognized at all churches and other places of meeting on that date. The day has been set apart for the purpose by Governor Olcott.

In a statement addressed to the people the governor remarks that the idea of this day is to bring home more strongly and vividly to the people of the various commonwealths the secredness of our constitution and our laws, and particularly of our federal constitution.

"I trust our people will pause on that day long enough to give due consideration to the value and meaning of our institutions."
