LAMBERT WINS FROM KANTHE

Salem Grappler Garners Two Falls in Bout With Michigan Athlete

World Champ Middleweight, Referee Last Night, Talks of Go in Salem

George Lambert won two falls from Richard Kanthe in their wrestling match at the Grand theater last night under the auspices of the Elks. It took an hour and three minutes for Lambert to score the first fall and 23 minutes to win the second.

Three excellent wrestling bouts were staged at the Elks' show before a very enthusiastic crowd. Preliminary is draw

The first, between Ellis Whits, captain of the Salem high school football team, and Paulmore Baggett of last year's high school wrestling squad, was for 15 minutes, ending in a draw.

The second, Art McClain, former O. A. C. star, and George Anderson of the Kirkwood Auto company, went on for 15 minutes. McClain was the faster, but Anderson's rugged strength made it a fair match until an excruciating neck hold led him to yield the fall.

The main bout, between George Lambert, now of Salem, and Richard Kanthe of Michigan, was certainly a good bit of sport. The weights were announced at the middleweight limit of 158 pounds. Kanthe might have weighed it, but Lambert looked 10 to 15 pounds the heavier.

But the strength and endurance of Lambert was finally too much for the lighter, clever man, and Lambert won the second fall in 23 minutes.

Lambert wrestles cleanly, and with a mask-like smile that was in strange contrast with the anxious Kanthe. It was probably the greatest match ever pulled off in Salem.

At the close, Kanthe refused to shake hands with the victorious Lambert.

Referee Thyne announced to the crowd that he had been challenged to meet the winner of the match. "I understand this fellow Lambert claims some sort of championship," he said. "I will meet Lambert if a suitable crowd of purse can be arranged."

Later, Thyne said that there was not much probability of a match in Portland, as the world's top-notchers have been appearing there, like Ben Reubens, Walter Miller, Pinky Gardner and Mike Yokel, and that as Lambert is a stranger he wouldn't help to draw a crowd.

There might be enough of a crowd in sight here in Salem, Lambert has won two matches here, and has demonstrated class.
