

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

Adèle Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE CHAPTER 285

WHAT LILLIAN UNDERWOOD DID WHEN SHE EXAMINED THE ALICE HOLCOMBE LETTERS.

Before I answered Lillian's question, I walked up to her, took her by the shoulders and held her at arm's length away from me. "You wonderful woman!" I said fervently. "Who else in the world could have gotten me out of that cross-questioning, with no one suspecting your real reason for taking me away?"

Light Words. "Nothing like setting the stage," she said dryly. "Remember, you're to have taught me that new stitch by dinner time. Luckily nobody knows what particular stitch I meant, so I'll just set up something I know how to do. Go ahead. I can think better with those things in my hands."

ber, you're to have taught me that new stitch by dinner time. Luckily nobody knows what particular stitch I meant, so I'll just set up something I know how to do. Go ahead. I can think better with those things in my hands." She sat down in one of the chairs, and the long, polished needles began to flash through the brightly colored wool which she had taken from the knitting bag. "This is a lovely mid-Victorian picture," I said dryly. "But I am afraid I shall have to spoil it, for I want you to look at these things, which I never could explain them to you orally."

This may be a man's world, but America is a woman's country! Mrs. Forbes-Robertson Hale, actress, lecturer and author, who has come to the United States from her home in England to lecture, insists on this point. She says that England is a man's domain, while America is a woman's country. She also says, "The American woman is better dressed than the English woman. When a family in America has money it is spent on the women members. In England it is spent on the boys for colleges and other things. In America the woman is considered of foremost importance. In England it is the man, not only in education but in everything else."

SOVIETS KILLED, FOOD IS STOLEN

Cossack Raiders Visit Small Town in Samara, Americans Are Respected

NIKOLAIEVSK, Samara Province, Russia, Jan. 28.—Cossack counter-revolutionaries who have just raided this place respected to the last detail American relief administration supplies but shot 50 Communists, blew up the principal buildings of the town, and looted Soviet government warehouses filled with furs, matches, skins, tobacco and military stores. Their entrance was picturesque. They came in 800 strong, mounted on black horses, and each man and woman armed with rifles, two slings of cartridge belts, knives and pistols. Riding at the head was their leader, Safins, tall and wearing a ferocious looking black beard. Behind the cavalry came a train of 200 wagons, brought from the fastnesses of the Ural mountains to carry away the loot.

cisco, the only American in the place and in charge of the relief supplies for the children, he notified that American supplies would not be looted. During the day the Soviet supplies were loaded on the wagons. 175 prisoners were released from the jails, all the available horses were taken, and the counter-revolutionary band departed. On the way out they passed undisturbed other American supplies. When the Communists returned they at once locked up the village priests and shot a number of villagers guilty of looting the stores left by the counter-revolutionary band. In this region there are 140,000 children, 46,000 of whom are being fed by the Americans. The others are starving. The country is desolate, barren of grass and trees, and its scanty crops of the past summer were all requisitioned. In September, 24,000,000 pounds of flour were milled here and all of it shipped to Moscow or Petrograd, for the Red army, or other uses. Unlike the other towns, here no food of any kind is to be had for money.

Mrs. Robert B. Honeyman, Jr., ridicules that her father, John B. Stewart, multi-inventor, was once a humble horse clipper under the name of Dennis or Terrence O'Brien.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS

'THE THREE MUSKETEERS'

"Here is presented to you the greatest action picture ever made—a marvelous, magnificent photoplay that is a torrent of power without a single dull moment throughout its entire course. Never before in film history has there been such a gloriously entertaining blend of humor and pathos, of love and jealousy, of happiness and of sorrow, because never has there been a story comparable in scope and in appeal, to 'The Three Musketeers.'" syllable. Do-not-take-things-to-heart-so-much. Her smiling, comprehending eyes caressed me and quieted the nervousness that I subsequently knew was consuming me. I felt my nerves relaxing, as they always do under the influence of Lillian's steady common sense.

"I'd defy any one to have nerves with you on the job," I retorted lovingly. "But I think you will agree with me that these are enough to upset me."

I handed the anonymous missives to her. She glanced at the superscriptions of all of them first. "Clever work," she commented. "This has been done on one of those folding typewriters which can be carried around with you. A person can have one of those and no one but himself know it, while a big one is always very much in evidence. It will be hard to trace the authorship of these, for those stamped envelopes can be obtained at any postoffice, and I see he has mailed them each from a different place and always at night. Probably dropped them in corner boxes."

"I notice you say 'he,'" I ventured, for she had not yet shut her mind away from everything and everybody as is her way when studying a problem, and I was sure the interruption wouldn't annoy her.

"Oh, I've no doubt it's that unspeakable private detective again!" she returned. "He's certainly doing a fine see-sawing job, trying to frighten first one and then the other of you two girls to death. I suppose you heard from Miss Holcombe today about these."

"Katie told me shortly after I came home," I said. "I telephoned her from the drugstore, and then took her to Mrs. Wynne's tea room, where she gave these to me."

"I see." The words were perfunctory, and I saw that she was fully absorbed in the contents of the envelopes which she was examining carefully in the order of their sending, as Alice Holcombe had marked them. When she had finished the last one she dropped them in her lap and looked across at me, her face flushed with anger.

"I'd like to have the lynching"

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application of two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold. Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair. Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.—Adv.

of that lad," she said. "I've always been opposed to mob law, but I don't think I could keep my fingers off a rope if he were the luncheon."

FOLEY'S HAS NEVER FAILED

January is a bad month for influenza, la grippe and bronchial troubles. It is unwise to neglect the slightest cough or cold. Foley's Honey and Tar gives prompt relief, and gets right at the trouble, covers raw inflamed surfaces with a healing coating, clears the air passages, eases stuffy breathing and permits sound, refreshing, health-building sleep. Mrs. F. A. Gibson, 1547 College Ave., Racine, Wis., writes: "Foley's has never failed in giving immediate relief and I am never without it." Sold everywhere.—Adv.

SOVIET COURTS HANDLE DIVORCE

American Visitor Impressed By Methods of New Russian Bureaus

RIGA, LATVIA, Jan. 17.—Three divorces to any one person are considered the limit in Soviet Russia, according to Parley Christensen of Chicago, candidate for president of the United States on the Farmer-Labor party ticket in 1920, who recently spent a month in Moscow. Mr. Christensen visited several Bolshevik courts. "It is fairly easy to get a divorce in Soviet Russia," said Mr. Christensen when in Riga, "but I understand the limit is three for each person. If a man or woman has appeared in the divorce courts more than three times, he or she has a very difficult time. "I visited one divorce hearing. It was extremely simple. The pair was separated in half an hour. On arrival in the court room, the man and woman were separately questioned by the judge. He then got them together and tried to persuade them that their quarrel could be patched up and they might live together. They couldn't see it that way, so the judge took them into another room to sign papers dissolving their marriage. Mr. Christensen also visited a number of 'People's court,' corresponding to police courts in America, where persons are tried for minor offenses. Most of the judges, he said, were dressed in rough clothes, including brown flannel shirts. "In general," said Mr. Christensen, "I was amazed at the fairness of these courts."
