

ASTORIA GIVEN INCREASED FARES

Order of Public Service Commission Withdraws Rate Suspension

In an order yesterday withdrawing suspension of increased street car fares at Astoria, the public service commission pointed out that the present 5-cent fares do not come near reaching operating expenses and ultimately would cause discontinuance of service.

The Astoria Street Railways, owned by the Pacific Power & Light company, filed its increased fares about seven months ago, but they were suspended by the commission pending investigation.

The order yesterday allows them to become effective, which they will do Monday next. The order says in part: "It is evident that a continuance of the 5-cent fare would fall short of the payment of actual operating expenses and would inevitably result in a discontinuance of street car service."

The university incorporation, planned in 1842 became a reality in 1852, 11 years after the first great dream there in the old mission. It is impossible fairly to estimate the number of students who have passed through the Willamette and the old Oregon institute halls in these 80 years; though tentative figures have set it at 10,000—which might be close or far from the truth.

The attendance was never before as large as at present, when there are about 500 in attendance. Professor Gatke speaks. Prof. Robert Gatke, of the history department of Willamette, gave a brief address at chapel Tuesday, covering some of the early history of the famous old school. It wasn't planned to celebrate today, as the semester examinations are on in full blast, beginning this morning, and the past isn't in it with the deadly present when there's a flunk hanging over every unguarded undergraduate head.

file for each month of the current year, including January, statement of the number of each kind of fares collected, together with the operating revenue and expenses and the resulting operating income. Such statements shall be set up in accordance with the commission's classification of accounts and shall be continued until further notice.

TODAY 80TH BIRTHDAY OF OLD WILLAMETTE

Latin and general science. Geography Much Changed. What a queer book one of those old geographies would seem today. Alaska was Russian; no body really knew who owned Oregon or any part of the north-west, except Russia. Japan was a devil's wild land; China was little known, the whole western half of North America was the abode of howling wildcats and whatever was least desirable in natural history or civilization.

The "science" books were even more curious. They didn't know the telegraph, the telephone, the arc or incandescent light, the steam turbine, dynamite, half of the gases or two-thirds of the chemical elements that are today common. JANUARY GOLD RECORDS SHOW

Most Frigid Temperature 15 Degrees—Rainfall is Below Average

The past month of January has been a rather chilly month. During 11 nights of the month the mercury fell below the freezing point, and six nights it was 20 degrees above or colder.

The coldest night of the month was when the mercury dropped to 15 above and that was on the night of January 19. Two other nights the temperature was 17 above, and on the early morning of the last day of the month, 19 degrees above.

During the entire month of January the mercury only climbed up to the 55 notch as a maximum temperature, and during 10 days of the month the maximum was between 31 and 40 degrees.

The total rainfall for the month was 3.10 inches, somewhat below the average. During January one year ago the rainfall was 7.27 inches.

Harvey McLain, official weather recorder for Salem, and whose reports are sent to Portland to become the government's official records, reports that three entirely clear days during January. Six days were reported as partly cloudy, and the other days as cloudy.

The maximum and minimum temperatures of each 24 hours, and the rainfall, as reported by Mr. McLain for January, are as follows:

Dempsey and Brennan Are Barred from New York

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The proposed match between Jack Dempsey and Bill Brennan for the world's heavyweight boxing championship will not be tolerated in New York, William Muldoon, chairman of the state athletic commission today informed Tex Rickard, promoter. The plans had been under way to hold the bout in Madison Square Garden, March 17. Mr. Rickard, following Mr. Muldoon's statement, said all his negotiations for the bout were abandoned.

MISS MAC LAREN PRESENTS PLAY

"Enter Madame" Is Very Cleverly Given by Actress at Grand Last Night

Salem folk last night had an opportunity to see the play rated as one of the best produced in the city. They lived through the sparkling comedy and the touches of pathos in the life of a temperamental, lovable, changeable, grand opera star and her husband.

Gay MacLaren, not with a traveling company, but all by herself brought the play to the Grand theatre. Miss MacLaren, the "girl of the camera mind," the girl of "a thousand voices," took the part of 19 characters included in the cast of "Enter Madame." So rapid and so definite was her transition from one character to another, the charming Madame, the worried husband and the mistreated son, that the illusion seemed almost perfect.

When she takes the part of Madame Lisa Del Robbia, she is witty and elusive, and as the worthy husband she depicts the worried husband determined to be done with his wife, to divorce her and yet failing to disguise the fact that he still loves her. The staid and proper English secretary, who is the only one of Madame's servants who speaks English, is, as the maid says, in danger of having nervous prostration of her morals.

So well does Miss MacLaren create the atmosphere of the play that one can almost see the pipe which the husband is smoking, the phone which rings and must be answered, the table set and decorated with orange blossoms, the hurried servants packing for Madame, all seem so real that spectators might only close their eyes to imagine themselves in the presence of a complete cast of the highest calibre.

Miss MacLaren, who was brought to Salem by the Arts League, has what is considered remarkable powers of imitation. She says that as a child she delighted in calling her playmates by the names of the women she wanted to go on the stage, but since her parents opposed this she "just began giving the play herself." Later she was on the stage and has played all parts including leading lady.

Miss MacLaren selects her list of plays to go from those which seem most popular in New York and which are most kindly spoken of by the critics. She sees the play five times and then has both the words and the actions. Because it is hard to rehearse in New York as she must do for speed in recreating plays, she goes to her summer home on the coast of Maine where, high above the cliffs, she strives to perfect herself in rapid transition from one character to another.

A New York paper recently had a story of an amusing incident connected with her rehearsals in the city. She was working on "Lella" and a colored maid in the apartment hotel heard the voice of a woman asking if they should pull the dagger out and the man's voice saying "No for he'd probably bleed to death." The maid in fright called help and when the manager rapped on the door, Miss MacLaren's voice bade him enter. She was both "the man and the woman" whom the maid had heard.

Miss MacLaren is in private life Mrs. Albert Sweet and is anticipating a trip to Salem next Monday with her husband, Albert Sweet, who comes with the Singing Band of the Pantages circuit. She leaves today to join New Sweet in Tacoma and after leaving Salem will go down into California where both have engagements. The audience thrilled from laughter to tears and seemed to enjoy every minute of the play. But it was disappointingly small for the treat which is so far beyond many here on the Pacific coast.

will be used in buying equipment for the Athletic club. Mrs. Louis Johnston and Mrs. William Meir gave a birthday party last Saturday afternoon at Mrs. Johnston's home for Paul Johnston, Percy and Milan Meier. F. Gustafsen intends to start soon for Colorado where he has a large farm. He has sold his farm here back to the former owner, A. Battencourt, who has already moved out from Salem, and is starting spring work. A. T. Pettijohn, who has been sick with grip, is able to be about again.

BOX SOCIAL IS SHRINE'S PLAN

Event of Thursday Night Intended to Be More Than Usually Enjoyable

Thursday evening at the Shrine mosque the Shriners of Salem and vicinity and their women folk will make merry with a genuine old fashioned box social. Each Shriner has been given the privilege of inviting one extra couple to take part in the affair.

The social is one of a series of events planned by the entertainment committee. Announcements sent out by the committee bear the information that a big time is to be had by the Shriners and their invited guests. Also, that two special Shrine auctions will be on hand to put up at auction the box of eatables brought by each woman.

The spread will be interspersed with songs, stories, instrumental music, and possibly dancing, as an orchestra will be on hand to keep the entertainment moving. The auction of "boxed food" will begin at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. The entertainment committee in charge of the affair includes Albert Gilie, William McGehehr, J. E. B. Potter and Oscar B. Gingrich.

Fine Showing is Made by Silverton Schools

During the month of January, Silverton schools enrolled 364 boys and 391 girls. The school census of Silverton is now close to 1900, and within another year will entitle the district to the privileges of a district of the first class. The school census includes all who live in the district and who are between the ages of 4 and 20 years.

Wide-Tired Truck Found Beating Speed Limitation

F. P. Murphy, driver for the Great Northern Transfer company, of Portland, was yesterday found guilty of a charge of exceeding speed schedules for trucks as established by recently enacted state legislation. The verdict against Murphy was returned by a jury in the court room of G. E. Uhrh, justice of the peace. Murphy was recently arrested by State Traffic Officer D. M. Brown, and was accused of driving his truck at a rate in excess of 12 miles an hour. Murphy's truck has extra-wide tires having a total footage of 36 inches of rubber and under the new code such a truck must not proceed faster than 12 miles per hour.

Relief from Debt to Highway Board Sought

LA GRANDE, Or., Jan. 31.—Commercial organizations of La Grande and Cove are preparing an appeal to the state highway commission to have the commission refrain from asking Union county to repay approximately $300,000, owing to the commission in connection with highway work in Union county. The need for a road between Cove and La Grande cannot be relieved this year if Union county must pay its indebtedness to the highway commission, says the petition.

JURY OBTAINED

VALE, Or., Jan. 31.—A jury was obtained here today at the opening of the trial of Archie Nichols, charged with the murder of William P. Hicks, Jordan Valley pool room proprietor, on December 5, 1921. The tragedy took place during a brawl in the pool room.

BILL TAKEN UP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The cooperative marketing bill will be taken up by the senate when it reconvenes Thursday. Adjournment until that time was taken tonight because of the plenary session of the arms conference scheduled for tomorrow.

Sacred Heart Academy to Give Attractive Play

Sacred Heart academy will give a cantata at the Grand theatre Friday night, Feb. 17. For those who would revive in themselves "the old time schoolyard" spirit, the play "The Tyrolean Queen" which is to be staged at the theatre is said to be just the tonic. The pupils of Sacred Heart academy are industriously rehearsing this spectacular cantata and are confident of delighting a large and appreciative audience. Like a trip through Fairyland with reality thrown in for good measure is claimed for this striking play.

Susanna Watters Will Be Admitted to Probate

The will of Susanna Watters, who died at Stayton, has been filed for probate in the county court. The will is dated November 29, 1921. The executor of the estate is instructed to convert all personal and real property into cash. To her daughters, Maud Harlan and Zula Moser, there was willed by Mrs. Watters $200 cash each. After the payment of these two bequests, the will provides that the balance of the estate shall be divided share and share alike between the following children of Mrs. Watters: Edgar Watters, Fred Watters, Bert Watters, Lola Barley, Maud Harlan and Zula Moser. Bert Watters was named as executor of the estate.

Noted Social Worker is Speaker in Salem Today

Dr. W. J. Johnson, of Pittsburg, president of the board of temperance and moral welfare of the Presbyterian church, and also president of the Magna Charta association of the seven English-speaking nations of the world, is to be a Salem guest today. At 11 o'clock he is to address the students of the high school on the problems of community, social and moral welfare. In the evening, he is to address the people of Salem in a public meeting, to which all are invited, at the Presbyterian church, on the general topic of "The Moral Condition of the World," as it is or can be effected by the people of America. Dr. Johnson was at McMinnville, to address the college yesterday, and he goes to Corvallis for Thursday. He is rated as a speaker of national calibre.

COTTON CROP SMALL

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 1.—Mexico's cotton crop this year will not be more than 80,000 bales as compared to a normal annual crop of 125,000 bales, according to recent estimates. The decrease is said to be the result of the termination of growers in the Laguna district, where the bulk of the crop is produced, not to cultivate their fields until market prices are higher.
