A NUMBER of small informal social affairs were given yesterday and last night for Gay MacLaren, who accompanied her husband, Albert Sweet, on the Pantages circuit. Mr. and Mrs. Sweet were entertained at a small dinner party at the Spa before the evening Pantages show last night.

Mrs. William H. Burghardt Jr. received a number of women at a charming afternoon in Mrs. Sweet's honor yesterday and following the evening show Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Rahn were hosts at a delightful evening affair.

Following the wedding service a dinner was served by Mrs. Charles Van Nuys, after which the young couple departed for a short wedding trip.

CHAPTER 296

WHAT JACK DID, AND HOW HARRIET BRAITHWAITE MADE THINGS RIGHT WITH KATHERINE.

Jack did not leave us long in doubt as to his actions. With chafy face and eyes in which humiliation and remorse had replaced anger, he strode up to Dr. Braithwaite and said in low, yet clear tones:

"Will you permit me to apologize for making an unmitigated ass of myself a few minutes ago?"

It was his hand that was outstretched now. The big physician's hand shot out and grasped it firmly.

"Do you think I don't understand the state of your nerves, lad?" he asked, carefully avoiding any intimation of—if, indeed, he

The social group of the Order of the Eastern Star will hold their regular monthly meeting today in the Masonic temple. Hostesses for the afternoon are Mrs. Daisy McIntyre, Mrs. G. L. Arbuckle, Mrs. Carrie Chase, Mrs. M. T. Belyer and Mrs. W. E. Tomlinson.

Miss Anna McIntyre and Miss Angelina Ryan of Stanton returned from McMinnville Monday following a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hoereth.

Mrs. Lloyd E. Weeks will entertain with a birthday party Thursday for her small daughter, Janet, whose third birthday it is. A number of small misses will enjoy the affair.

The officers of the W.R.C. will give a Valentine party in the armory this afternoon for the members of the G.A.R. and W.R.C.

suspected any—personal reason for Jack's former behavior. "The Lord knows I've seen enough of 'em this last year. Forget everything about it, and—Dick—where the devil do you keep those cigars of yours? You're not getting stingy in your old age, are you? Come on, Spencer, suppose we men take a smoke in the garden while the women are fighting over the proper way to bring up Junior."

Katherine's Eyes Blue.

So skillfully did he manage things with Dicky ably seconding him, that in another minute the four men had disappeared down the garden path, and we four women—Mother Graham, Harriet Braithwaite, Katherine and I—were left gazing breathlessly at each other, thankful beyond measure that an ugly situation had been successfully straightened out.

Mother Graham, of course, knew nothing of the "real inwardness" of the little drama which had just been staged. What she suspected we had no means of knowing, for like the thoroughbred old gentleman she is, she forbore to make any comment upon what she had seen. But I shrewdly suspected that when she was alone with her daughter, Harriet Braithwaite would undergo a merciless quizzing as to the meaning of the scene.

There was that between Katherine on the one side, Harriet and me on the other, however, which must be explained before very long. Katherine was too shrewd a woman not to suspect that this meeting with the Braithwaite at our home was not the accident I had made it appear. She was justified in resenting the fact, even if she did not understand it, and I saw by the expression in her big brown eyes that her bewilderment at the bizarre situation in which she found herself was beginning to be punctuated with wrath.
