By MARGUERITE GLEESON

MISS Catherine Giles was honored Wednesday at the luncheon hour by the women with whom she works in the state industrial accident commission. The affair was a surprise to Miss Giles and was given in the commission rooms at the state house. A miscellaneous shower was the gift of the hostesses.

Miss Gile will be married April 20 to Raymond Siderous of Portland who is employed in the engineering department of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company. They will be married in Portland where they will make their home. Miss Gile has made her home in Salem for the last year and a half while employed at the state house.

Those honoring Miss Gile included Mrs. Winnifred Dennison, Mrs. Winnie Brown, Miss Dorothy Cardin, Miss Winnie Brown, Miss Mable Becker, Miss Dorothy

Chambers, Miss Carolyn Nerod, Miss Vera Hammond, Miss Clara Sells, Miss Margaret Putnam, Miss Madeline Peterson, Miss Anna Alne, Miss Bernice Craig, Miss Myrtle Reeves, Miss Mossie, Miss Virginia Knowland, Miss Clara Miller, Miss Ruth Lines, Miss Iselta Walker, Miss Letha Wilson, Miss Norma Derrick, Miss Maud Stenstrom, Miss Edna Warden, Miss Lillian Johnson, Miss Esther Mason, Miss Sudie Mathis, Miss Isabelle Miller and Miss Ruth Walker.

The Count-On-Me class of First Baptist church met with Mrs. E. J. Roth Wednesday afternoon. Miss Dora Walker was assistant hostess. Mrs. E. W. Walker assisted.

Mrs. B. E. Heikes led the devotions; Mrs. George O'Neil had charge of the social hour. A program included a piano selection, Lucile Mosher; reading, Mrs. Charles Oglesby; song, "Wearing of the Green," by Mrs. J. Mien-dinger; piano and violin duet, Carlton and Edward Roth.

Miss Janet Smith, northwest secretary of the Y.W.C.A., was in Salem yesterday on her way to Eugene. Miss Miriam E. Anderson accompanied her to Albany.

Because the society and club pages go to press unusually early Saturday, it is necessary that reports of social affairs and club notices be in the Statesman office Friday evening or early Saturday. No reports will be received in future later than 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon unless by special arrangement in the case of meetings held Saturday afternoon. The society editor is in the office from 1 until 4 o'clock and from 7 until 10 every day.

CLUBS AND WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

Mrs. Alice H. Dodd, instructor in history of art at Willamette university, will address the Silver-ton Women's club March 24. The affair is the annual benefit of the club for the library.

Mrs. Dodd will talk on oriental customs and will take with her for display a number of her oriental draperies and other things from her collections of art.

Missionary Is Welcomed to Orient

Letters were received in Salem yesterday from Miss Laura Heist who has reached her destination, Baroda, India, for which place she started last December as a missionary teacher. Miss Heist left without a definite assignment but she has now been assigned to a girls' school in Baroda. More than 250 girls are taught in this school. They range in age according to Miss Heist, from four years of age to some more than 10 years older than herself. The work given ranges from the beginners' classes to those ready to enter college. Many of the women in Miss Heist's classes are married and bring their children with them to the school.

Miss Heist received a most cordial welcome in true oriental fashion, the students lining both sides of the walk from the gate to the entrance to shower her with flower petals. The school is situated in the outskirts of Baroda which has more than 12,500 people. It is 250 miles from Bombay. Miss Laura Austin, of Woodburn, who was with Miss Heist until she reached Baroda returned to Bombay after getting her things which were stored near Baroda. Miss Austin has been assigned to work in Bombay for the future.

Unlike Bombay, Baroda is a strictly native city. A Willamette university dinner was given by George Odgers, former Salem man and graduate of the university who is stationed in Calcutta, where he is principal of a boys' school. Miss Ruth Fields, daughter of Mrs. Dexter Fields of Walnut Farms near Salem, was a guest beside Miss Heist and Miss Austin. University colors were used to decorate the table for the dinner party.

Miss Heist said that while she was learning the language before going into the school room she had already taught some classes in the absence of Miss Chilson, the principal, whose assistant she will be. Miss Chilson is to go away in the near future for medical treatment for her eyes and Miss Heist will take her place.

The seven teachers in the school which is on the outskirts of the town. Miss Heist speaks in her letter of looking into the trees outside her windows and watching the monkeys jumping around. She also refers to the numerous crows and bats she has seen. While learning the language of the natives she says she must also learn many new English words not familiar to her.

The party of which Miss Austin and Miss Heist were members sailed from San Francisco December 20 and she arrived in Baroda February 4.

Quite the thing is the Far East this year for the "bend" to show she knows how to save money by using common household utensils for decorative purposes. This comb, surmounted by a teapot, is of snappy design and emanates from a Japanese bazaar.

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

Adele Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER 231
WHAT ROBERT SAVARIN SAID TO LITTLE MARION

I felt as if Lillian had divined my need of her and had answered it when the morning after Esther Walters had brought me the note Lillian's voice came over the telephone from the city.

"Just got in and saw the papers," she said briskly. "I suppose you've already heard."

"Last evening, personal message," I returned cryptically, realizing that Mr. Walters had wished to forestall the newspapers in giving me the news.

"Don't worry. I'll be out on the first train," she said. "How is Marion?"

"Splendid," I returned, "or was five minutes ago. She went to stay all night with the little playmate you like so well in the next block, and she just telephoned me she is on the way home."

"All right, good-by," and the receiver clicked its farewell before I could tell her the news of Robert Savarin's arrival.

Someone Overhears.

Not that I wanted to give her that message. I much preferred their meeting to be an unexpected one, for I was trying in every way to aid Robert Savarin in the contest of wills I saw coming between them, and a meeting which he was expecting but which should hold an element of surprise for her ought to score a point or two in the man's favor.

I turned from the telephone to see Robert Savarin himself slowly descending the stairs.

"Pardon me, I could not help overhearing you say Mrs. Underwood's name," he said with the courtly manner which has never deserted him. "May I ask if you expect her here soon?"

"Today," I answered. "She said she would be out on the first train. That will bring her here at a quarter to twelve."

"Does she know that I am here?"

There was a ring in his voice that I had never heard before, and his forefear, direct catechizing of me was so unlike the Robert Savarin I had known that I was afraid I might inadvertently betray my amazement. I tried to make my voice matter of fact in answering.

her worthily and lost her. The next minute Marion had danced breezily into the room, kissed me enthusiastically, and begun to recount the good time she had at the home of her friend, Carolyn. She hadn't seen the figure of the artist standing in the shelter of the window curtains, and with a smile at me and a finger on his lips he stole up behind her and put his clasped, slender fingers over her eyes.

"Who is it?" she asked quickly, startled, then with an instant appreciation of the childish game, "I suppose I'm to guess." She put up her own hands and traced the outlines of those covering her eyes. Then with a shriek of delight she tore loose, turned and threw her arms around Robert Savarin's neck.

"Oh—oh—Uncle Bob!" she carolled. "Oh, why haven't you been to see me before? It's been so lonely for me without you."

"It's been lonely for me, too, sweetheart," he said softly. "But there were reasons why I shouldn't come before."

"I know," Marion nodded her head wisely. "Mother said I was not to fret even if I did not see you for a terrible long time, because there were reasons which I mustn't ask about why you couldn't come down here or we couldn't go up there. I'm so glad they're all over. They must be over, aren't they?" she asked in quick alert, sensing with quick childish instinct the shadow that had crept into Robert Savarin's eyes. "Else you wouldn't be here now."

The artist kissed her gravely, released his arms and straightened himself to his full height. He did not speak for a full half-minute, and when he did his words were like a vow.

"If they're not over now, Marion, they will be soon," he said slowly, measuredly.

COOS BAY MAYOR IS REAL BOOSTER

Duncan Ferguson Tells What Mills Are Doing in Big Coast County

"We're selling lumber to almost the whole world," said Duncan Ferguson, mayor of Marshfield, who arrived Wednesday for a brief visit to Salem. "All the mills are running on full time. One shift, and they are getting rid of their product, too. Some of it goes to Japan, some to Australia, some to other foreign countries, but most of it stays right at home in America. California is taking the large part of our cut, at the present time.

"Some good business has been built up in the manufacture of myrtle wood novelties. The myrtle, however, which is largely a monopoly for the Coos bay section, is not plentiful. It could never become much of a commercial product. And it grows so slowly. I am told that it takes at least 120 years for a tree to reach a size for even the easiest commercial usage. It is one of the most beautiful trees that ever grew. It grows just as if it were trimmed microscopically by an artistic gardener. A myrtle growing out in the raggedest wilderness, grown just as perfect as a tree could be trimmed in a city park. There wouldn't be much inducement to the private forester to plant myrtle trees as a commercial proposition. It would take too long to reap a harvest. Some coal is being mined from the hills around Coos bay. A little of this coal is going abroad, for the steamships that ply out of the bay. But it is in the wood and the water that we pin our faith. They look mighty good to us."

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.—Adv.
