

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF

Back to First Love—Dr. Griffith, wife and son (De-los) last week returned to Salem, their first love and old home, which looks good to them, with many improvements during their absence of five years in Kansas City and vicinity. They have bought a residence and leased an office for five years. Having recently taken a post-graduate course and laboratory work for two years (in California), Dr. Griffith feels better prepared than ever to help the sick. When a very young man, Dr. Griffith taught school in Marion county. He has lived in Salem and Portland most of the years since. He is glad to meet his old pupils and friends of yore, and he says he intends to stay in Salem forevermore.

They Didn't Stop—Harley and Davidson, motorcycle kings, of Milwaukee, were scheduled to visit Salem last week and stay for at least one or two days here and at Woodburn. They were coming up from California on a tour of the coast. Their coming was postponed from day to day, until finally they catapaulted in and out of town on Wednesday without even stopping to look at the civic center or wide streets or at Harry Scott's, their star cycle seller. They went on to Portland, and are not expecting to find time to return.

Card of Thanks—We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy and beautiful floral offerings during the illness and bereavement of our beloved son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McAllister.—Adv.

Appeal is Filed—Appeal from a ruling issued by the state industrial accident commission was filed in Marion county circuit court, yesterday by Kollina Furrer. Mrs. Furrer is the widow of Daniel Furrer who died in Salem, February 4, 1922, as a result of injuries sustained while working in a garage, the property of his son-in-law, A. A. Krueger. In a recent ruling, according to the appeal, the commission denied the widow's claim for settlement under the terms of the industrial aid act, holding that Furrer had not been working as a bona fide employe by contract at the time of his death.

GILLET BACK BUT OFFERS NO FIGHT (Continued from page 1) appear on the floor. He went direct to his office where prominent Democrats were invited to meet him. He remained at the capitol for an hour or more but aside from those who conferred with him, few members of that house knew that he was in Washington. Mr. Frear said Secretary Mellon had written a letter condemning the compromise bonus bill without being asked by any member of the committee for his opinion and had made his letter of condemnation public before it was received by the committee. The Wisconsin member declared that Comptroller Crissinger did not know what the bill contained when he announced to the press that he would advise national banks act to loan money on the adjusted service certificates. Frear Voices Disgust "Congress," said Mr. Frear is warned daily, weekly and monthly of just what the secretary of the treasury and Comptroller Crissinger and other officials of the administration think of congress and of the soldiers' bonus bill. It is a novel proposition when Crissinger says that he will not permit national banks of the country to loan to the soldiers on their certificates if the bill is passed by congress. "Thousands of other banks will do so if our advice are right on what meat does Crissinger feed and for whom does he speak? Is Crissinger or congress to determine what the bill contains? Crissinger claims that when the soldiers ask for loans they will find they have 'frozen credits.' "The freezing process that confronts the soldiers and congress today is that which comes from officials of the treasury department who have handed out many policies to congress and to the soldiers recently. Frequent threats are reported that campaign contributions will not be forthcoming unless a sales tax is passed as a substitute for the present personal income tax. Again it is the price of a general soldiers' bonus bill must be a general consumption tax to relieve large taxpayers. Questions Asked "As an evidence of frigidity by which the treasury department first demanded that obnoxious taxes be placed in the bonus bill, which we were later informed would have invited its veto; why the secretary of the department, next refuses congress a soldiers' bonus bill unless it provided its own means of payment? Why did the department object to paying any soldier bonus from treasury certificates when it had previously paid billions of dollars in cancelled war contracts? Why did the department reject any proposal to pay the soldiers' bonus bill by $11,000,000 in foreign debts? "Why is the sales tax constantly linked up with the soldiers' bonus bill when no general sales tax could pass congress unless fastened onto some worthy object? Why are the soldiers asked to help pay their own bonus through a sales tax and what special reason has Wall street and big business generally for demanding a sales tax? Big Incomes Rapped Mr. Frear declared that a table which he read, showing the income and surtaxes paid by the wealthy individuals, explains "why every man who pays a large income tax desires a sales tax that will relieve him from his income taxes." He added that any sales tax adopted would be repealed but would be constantly enlarged in its scope by interests that never sleep. Secretary Mellon's letter to Mr. Frear was in reply to the one written him last Monday by the Wisconsin representative. Declaring that his position had been fully stated in letters sent the way and means committees on January 24 and March 11, Mr. Mellon said he had "not attempted in them to argue the merits of the soldiers' bonus."

"Whether or not there is to be a soldiers' bonus," Mr. Mellon wrote, "it is a question for which, as you say, congress will assume responsibility. Recommendations Denied "For the treasury I have attempted to point out the necessity of meeting by taxation the cost of whatever bonus may be adopted and the dangers of attempting to provide for a bonus by borrowing or make shift measures. "As I think was made clear to the committee and the country, I have not recommended any particular taxes, though I have, at the request of the committee, suggested several possible sources of additional revenue that would be available if congress should decide to grant a soldiers' bonus. "I gather from your letter that you are under some misapprehension also as to the treasury's position with respect to a sales tax. The treasury has not recommended any general sales tax. As a matter of fact, I am not in favor of a general sales tax if it is to be imposed in accordance to all existing taxes unless made necessary by an emergency in the revenues, such as would arise through adoption of the bonus measure. No Analogy Seen "Neither the payments which the government has made in order to settle cancelled war contracts, nor the so-called railroad funding bill to which you refer, present situations in any way analogous to the soldier's bonus. In the first place, the government did not pay as you suggest, 'three billion dollars of cancelled war contracts.' "The so-called railroad funding bill has never become a law, and in any event would not have appropriated money out of the treasury."

Silverton Legion Man Makes Plans for Smoker SILVERTON, Or., March 17.—(Special to The Statesman)—The American legion of Silverton is planning a smoker for all ex-service men to be held at the American legion hall on April 3. Boxing and wrestling bouts, original vaudeville and a spread will be the entertaining features of the evening.

RECITAL PLEASES NORMAL AUDIENCE

Arnold Morgan, Tenor, and Burton Arant, Pianist, Heard This Week

OREGON NORMAL SCHOOL Monmouth, March 17.—Arnold Morgan, tenor, and Burton Arant, pianist, appeared in a concert in the normal chapel Wednesday evening and the standard set by previous numbers of the series of entertainments for the year was well maintained by these musicians. Incidentally, a neat sum was realized toward the purchase by the student body of the acre of ground pledged by them for the site of the Orphan's Home near Corvallis.

Mr. Morgan, who plans to pursue his musical studies in New York, has a remarkable tenor voice of true dramatic quality, and a brilliant career is predicted for him. His careful training, his musical intelligence, and his artistic ability were apparent in the rendition of every one of the varied songs of the program. Whether in the delicate, exquisite shadings and legato movement characteristic of "Duna" (McGill) in the first group, or in the dramatic requirements of the thrilling "Lorraine, Lorraine." Mr. Morgan was fully equal to the demands of both, and of every intervening character of rhythm and expression. It was an interesting program of modern songs, and every number met with enthusiastic favor. The rule of the evening was to omit encores, but several of the songs had to be repeated and only at the end, when the audience refused to leave their seats, did the singer respond with an extra number.

Mr. Arant came in for his share of honors on his own composition "My Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose," but modestly failed to recognize the unusual applause. His accompaniments throughout were played with sympathy and understanding and were a decided contribution to the inspiration of Mr. Morgan's singing, and his solo numbers were rendered with masterly precision and artistry. His numbers were well selected, and in addition to these, he graciously responded to an encore with a pleasing rendition of "Two Larks" (Leschetizky).

The program in full was as follows: I. (a) Life (Curran), (b) Morning, (Speaks); (c) Duna (McGill), II. A Prelude (Rachmaninoff), (b) To Spring (Grieg), III. A Deep River (Coleridge-Taylor), (b) Standin' in de Need of Prayer (Burleigh), (c) My Lost Chord (Sullivan), IV. (a) The Love Is Like a Red, Red Rose (rante), (b) Vale (Russell), (c) Lorraine, Lorraine, Lores (Spross), (d) Dawn in the Desert (Ross), V. Rhapsody No. 6 (Liszt), VVI. (a) In Flanders Fields (Spross), (b) Dearest (Homer), (c) Pale Moon (Logan), (d) Kashmiri Love Song (Woodford-Pinder), (e) There is no Death (O'Hara).

DEBATING TEAM MEETS REDLANDS

Sackett, Notson and Littler Compose Willamette University Trio

Sheldon Sackett, Robert Notson and Robert Littler, Willamette university's invincible trio, will meet the University of Redlands in debate next Monday evening in Waller hall chapel. This is the first debate on the Willamette schedule, according to Prof. F. M. Erickson, debate coach. "Resolved, That the union shop should prevail in American industry," is the question that will be debated. The debate team has been studying this question from all angles and sides and practice debates have decided and shown that it is a big topic and capable of wide possibilities. With the question well worked up and on the last steps for the meet, the team will spend the rest of this week putting the polish and finishing touches to the affirmative arguments. All of Willamette's men are experienced debaters. Sheldon Sackett, captain of the team, is a two-year varsity man with wide experience, Robert Notson is a one-year letter man, having participated in two intercollegiate contests bringing honor to himself. Robert Littler needs no further introduction. His experience and training as leader of the Oregon state championship debating team of last year, has placed him on Willamette's team for this year.

The University of Redlands has also a picked and well trained team. Its trainer and coach is Egbert Ray Nichols, author of "Intercollegiate Debate Briefs," and a writer of note on debating. Douglas Gordon McPhee, leader of the Redlanders is a three-year letter man with a record as a speaker in southern California.
