THE week preceding Easter will be quiet socially as is usually the case and will be marked by a number of pre-Easter sales given by church and social organizations.

The Lausanne Guild will sponsor a food sale for the benefit of a landscape gardening project which they propose to carry out around Lausanne hall. Mrs. E. T. Barnes is chairman of the committee in charge. Other members are Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. C. P. Bishop, Mrs. A. A. Lee, Mrs. J. H. Albert, Mrs. Robert J. Hendricks, Mrs. Carl Gross Doney, Mrs. G. H. Allen, Mrs. E. C. Richards, Mrs. W. R. Kirk and Miss Frances Richards.

The women of the Salem O.A.C. club have planned an Easter food sale for the benefit of the Marion county scholarship loan fund. The fund is available for any Marion county student who is attending Oregon Agricultural college.

Mrs. Mark McAllister is in charge of the sale and other women who are members of the committee include Mrs. David A. Wright, Mrs. A. E. McClain and Mrs. M. Wilcox.

A number of Salem musicians and music lovers will be among those going to Portland for the Fritz Kreisler concert this evening. Among those who will go down are Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Emmons, Miss Marian Emmons, Miss Mary Schuitz, Miss Viola Ash, Miss Iva Claire Love, Mrs. William Everett Anderson.

Miss Cornelia Marvin, state Hebrarian, left yesterday for the East where she will spend several weeks vacation.

CLUBS AND WOMEN'S ACTIVITIES

Women and the law in Oregon and the desirability of uniform state laws pertaining to women will be discussed by Judge George M. Brown at the meeting of the Salem Business and Professional Women's club tonight.

A short play will be put on by a group of the members under the direction of Miss Agnes Nelson. Dinner will be served at 6:30 for the members at the club rooms in the Unitarian church. A short business meeting will also be held following the dinner hour.

The Jason Lee Home Missionary society postponed their regular monthly meeting to some future date. It was to have met Friday afternoon.

"Real Daughter" To Be Honored By D.A.R. Women

The grave of Mrs. Hannah Pottorf, a real daughter of the Revolution, who is buried near Silverton, will be visited by members of Chemeketa chapter of the D.A.R. April 29. The local chapter plans to place a "real daughter's" marker on the tombstone of Mrs. Pottorf, in the near future. Word has recently been received by Mrs. Homer Goulet, state chairman of the "real daughter" committee, that these markers may be placed on the graves of real daughters even though they were not members of the national D.A.R. society.

The "real daughters" are own daughters of those who fought in the Revolutionary war. Since the D.A.R. was organized after many of these women died, the new regulation has been made.

Mrs. E. L. Loos of Silverton, who is a member of the local chapter of the D.A.R. will be hostess for the members when they visit Silverton. Mrs. Della Shepherd, a daughter of Mrs. Pottorf, will be visited by members of Chemeketa chapter while they are in Silverton also.

Mrs. Shepherd is only one of four living daughters of Mrs. Pottorf. Others are Mrs. Lucy Gerking, Mrs. Isabel Robinson and Mary Pottorf. Mrs. Shepherd is the only daughter residing in Silverton. Nearly all of the local members of the Daughters of the American Revolution are grand daughters or great-granddaughters of the revolution. A few members are even "more times removed" than great-granddaughters.

Oregon claims the last resting place of four other real daughters, according to the records of the national D.A.R. organization. These are Mrs. Susana Lee Barlow, who is buried near Barlow; Mrs. Sarah Matlock Thompson, Mrs. Elizabeth Rand Froman and Mrs. Margaret McClure Varney.

A letter received recently by Mrs. Goulet from officials of the D.A.R. says that by a recent ruling of the national board, real daughters of the revolution, may be honored by the placing of a "real daughters' tablet" on their headstone, whether they were members of the D.A.R. or not.

Chapters of the D.A.R. are being urged to seek out these graves and so honor the last resting place of those women who were real daughters of the American Revolution.

A number of women, eligible to membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution, reside near Silverton, and will be invited to attend the meeting at the home of Mrs. Loos. Mrs. C. M. Wray will assist Mrs. Loos in entertaining the visiting women while they are in Silverton.

Clackamas County Woman Attends Sick Brother

Mrs. W. G. Converse, of Hoff, Clackamas county, is in Salem, to help care for her brother, Truman Ide, who is seriously ill at 308 South Nineteenth street.

The Ide's are of the genuine American stock, they and their kinsmen, the Nyes, having come to Massachusetts in the early 17th century, in 1635 and 1637. The Ide's have a family genealogy running back to the tenth century. Their names appear on the Domesday Book of England, compiled by William the Conqueror in 1086. Mrs. Converse has at her home a great collection of family relics dating back to the colonial time, and Cassius Ide, her brother, living on South Fourteenth street in Salem, has the old pistol carried by his father, William Ide, when he as deputy sheriff and constable back in New Stockholm, New York, in the early 50's, before the common use of revolvers. It is a Marston & Know percussion arm, single shot, and an interesting study in firearms. It has been turned over to the fine collection belonging to Charles Lisle of the Statesman news force, and is now on exhibition at the Hauser Brothers sporting goods store.

Mr. Ide has a set of bound volumes of The Cultivator, an agricultural magazine published at Albany, New York, in the '40's. It advertises "an improved fall", and one serious article discusses how far superior the grain cradle is to the sickle. There is one news item of the importation of a fine herd of English cattle, by "Hon. Daniel Webster," who was then the leading statesman of America.

ALMOND TREES NOW BLOOMING

Trees on J. P. Smart Farm in Polk County Present Beautiful Sight

If anybody believes that all the trees are scared out by the weather, and afraid to take a chance in blossoming, he should see the splendid flowers of the almond trees out on the old Andrew Verceller farm west of Salew, now operated by J. P. Smart.

There are five or six of the trees, now grown to large size, for they are 20 years old. They haven't been sprayed, and they have gray moss as thick as a Kansas poulist's whiskers after a penniless winter. But the blossoms shine out like good deeds in a naughty world; great clusters of the pink-white blossoms, perhaps one-third fully open, the next third in various stages of blooming, and the rest still tightly rolled in the bud. When the trees are in full bloom they are a fair riot of color. The blossoms come ahead of the leaves, leaving the trees solid masses of bloom.

Mr. Smart says that his trees bloom with fair regularity, producing from two to three bushels of nuts per tree per year. He does not expect to "bust into" the almond growing business on a large scale, however; he believes other fruits and nuts would be more profitable, and more sure. A few years ago almonds were advocated over in Idaho and some very nice nuts were actually grown. However, the almond was found to be a false alarm as a money-maker for the north, and it failed to justify itself as a commercial proposition.

A few branches of almost incredibly bloom-laden trees were brought in by Mr. Smart. The Smart place is on the Oak Grove road, west of Salew; several hundred feet higher than the city, and always sheds the frost.

Mr. Smart tells an interesting story of his rhabarb. The old bed of Mammoth rhabarb on the place has been growing there for 32 years. It produces tons and tons of huge spring-medicine stalks that grow so profusely it can't be harvested and sold. During the war, when sugar went out of sight and the old tariff fence broke down so that the Sicilian lemons could come in free, the sugar price and the Italian lemon-ade put the California citrus growers and the Polk county rhabarb out for the count. They are both crawling back now, but Mr. Smart is still wondering just how far back his rhabarb will get.

NEW friends every day — and still on good terms with the old.

Interesting Lecture is Given by Professor Fake

"Vitamines and the Balanced Diet," was the subject on an interesting lecture at Waller hall Monday night by Prof. Lida Fake, head of the domestic science department of Willamette university. The history, value, need and all about the much discussed topic, vitamines, was made plain by the lecturer. After listening to Professor Fake one felt like having a long talk with the cook to see if there could be secured a diet which would include foods having much of the thing called vitamines.

This was the sixth of a series of faculty lectures conducted by the members of the faculty of Willamette. The last of the series will be Monday, April 24, at Waller hall chapel. It will be by Professor C. M. Panunzio on the subject of "Profiles of Prejudice." All friends and students of Willamette university are invited to be present.
