By MARGUERITE GLEESON

THE military ball so long anticipated by local society will be given this evening in the armory. The grand march which will be led by Governor and Mrs. Ben W. Olcott, will be preceded by an hour's concert. The concert is under the direction of Prof. John R. Sites and will feature flute and cornet solos. It will begin at 8 o'clock.

The military ball is to be a benefit for the American War Mothers and will be used for their memorial ward in the Salem hospital. Vocal numbers will be given this evening by Mrs. Harry Brumbaugh, Mrs. W. Carlton Smith, Lyman McDonald and Mrs. Oscar Gingrich; cornet solo by W. H. Mills; violin solo, Miss Viola Ash; flute solo by Miller Bover, and a trio composed of Miss Ash violin, Avery Hicks cello, and Dr. Sites piano.

The Thursday club will be entertained this afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. C. Cross. Joint hostesses will be Mrs. Russell Catlin and Mrs. H. B. Tholosen.

The O. A. C. club will be entertained Friday evening at the Friends of Alonzo Patchin of Salem have just recently learned of his marriage in Eugene February 6, to Miss Hazel Bullis of Corvallis. Mr. Patchin is a senior at Oregon Agricultural college where he has been champion light weight wrestler for several seasons.

Mrs. Patchin is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Bullis of Corvallis. Mr. Patchin is a member of Omega Upsilon fraternity. Mr. and Mrs. Patchin plan to make their home in Salem following his graduation from the college in June. Mr. Patchin is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund J. Patchin of Salem.

A marriage of much interest to Salem folks took place at the St. Regis hotel, New York City yesterday afternoon when Sidney Alexander Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Zollicoffer Mitchell, was married to Mrs. Mary Addison Whitlock, daughter of Dr. Thomas Addison, of New York City. Mr. Mitchell's father is Col. Sidney Zollicoffer Mitchell, president of the Electric Bond and Share company, of New York. His mother was Alice Bell, former Salem girl, and a daughter of Col. John Colgate Bell and Sarah Ward Bell, pioneers from Kentucky to Oregon in the early fifties.

Miss Teresa Ella D'Arcy and Judge Peter Henry D'Arcy were among those invited to the wedding and reception.

Butterflies, fairies, brownies and bunnies—all will frolic at the Butterfly queen's ball Friday evening. The brownies, elfin creatures will be among the most frolicsome of the numberless creatures who will enjoy the ball.

Masquerading as brownies will be 24 Salem boys. They are William Dyer, David Thompson, Rodrick Livesley, Samuel Harbison, Perry Buren, Jerry Stone, Junior Martin, Chester Olcott, James Dusenbury, James Nicholson, Robert Hugg, Ralph Carruthers, Martin Duffy, Parnell Kupper, Robert Utter, Richard Devers, Gordon Olcott, Wayne Sheldon, Jack McCullough, Homer Ingrey, Max Hauser, Harold Marquis, David Compton and Richard Olcott.

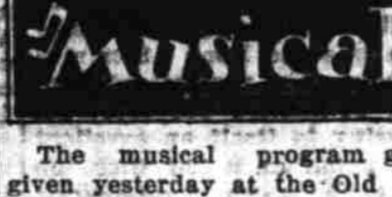

Dancing like true fairies of the land of make-believe will troop a group of little misses, Pauline Van Orsdel, Katherine Ellis, Zoe Schauter, Mildred Drager, Roberta McGilchrist, Josephine McGilchrist, Margaret Burdette, Helen Wohrt, Doris Abuckle, Lucile England, Eleanor Luper, Charity Watson, Isabelle Scott, Rosalie Sundin, Jane Harbison, Fay Thompson, Sylvia Solof, Helen Done, Prissilla Walsh, Lois Leedy, Letha Madison, Evangeline White, Esther Elliott, Lucy Burdick, Claudine Gueffroy, Ruth Nelson, Aelena Bremner, Iris Jorgenson.

THE NEWS THAT DICKY BROKE TO MADGE.

At Dicky's atrocious pun I caught my breath in startled recognition of the meaning of Alfred Durkee's query to Leila. This must be the thing which he had expected her to tell me. A little warning voice in my subconsciousness made me dissemble for a moment.

"Please translate into United States, Dicky," I said laughing. "I haven't the slightest idea what you mean."

"I've looked at me quizzically. 'Now I wonder if you're really dense or are just pretending for some unknown reason of your own,' he said shrewdly. 'However, I'll elucidate. Firstly, Meester Alfred Durkee, Esq., is to be married. Ergo, he is to be a bridegroom. Secondly, he needs a best man. Thirdly, I am or he says I am, his best friend. Ergo, I am chosen to be it! The whole works! His best man! Good at demonstrandum! Do you see?'"

"I see," I returned, involuntarily laughing at his ridiculous farrago with its jumbled mixture of terms, but secretly more disturbed at his news than I would have cared to let any one perceive. For, of course, I knew, as did we all, that Edith Fairfax was to be her sister's maid of honor, and I could not rise above the foolish feminine feeling that I could not bear to see my husband so closely and romantically associated with her, as he would be in the relation of best man and maid of honor at a wedding.

In Gay Mood.
But I saw that Dicky was elated at the news, that for some reason he was pleased as Punch because Alfred had given him the honor, and I resolved that I would let no foolish jealous thought of mine disturb him.

"How splendid!" I forced as much enthusiasm into my tone as I could manage. "This means a trip south for you, doesn't it?"

He looked at me quizzically, his eyes dancing. I saw that he was in one of his teasing moods, and I prepared to discount everything he said.

"Of course," he returned. "Don't you wish you were I?" I really feel sorry for you, poor dear, indeed I do, condemned to the rain and snow and sleet we always get up here in the spring, while I bask in the sunshine and roses and strawberries and watermelons of North Carolina."

"You must be contemplating an extended stay," I commented酸酸地. "I have never been south, but I have always been led to suppose that roses and strawberries are not due for several weeks to come in the Carolinas and watermelons—are you really going to be gone so long from home, Dicky, dear?"

He suddenly stretched his arms high above his head in the attitude of a man held up by a midnight marauder, calmly ignoring the scandalized amusement of two women on the other side of the street.

"Don't shoot! I'll come down," he quoted.

"Dicky!" I protested in a whisper. "Do stop! See! Those women are looking at you."

"What a treat they're having!" he retorted. "I'll give them another."

The Reason Disclosed.

To my horror, he lowered his arms, faced the women, both of whom were known only by sight, to me, swept off his hat and made them a low obeisanceavoring more of the feudal times than it did of the present day. Then he turned to me and offered me his arm with courtly grace, but with such a devil of amusement in his eyes that I felt compelled to take it for fear of what worse thing he might do next. And as I walked down the street in this ridiculous fashion I was sure that the report of my husband's probable access to some hidden store of intoxicants was already on the wing in Marvin. He shot a sly look at me as we turned the corner into our own street.

"Mad by me?" he coaxed.

"You know better," I returned, giving his arm a little squeeze. And, indeed, his good humor was infectious. I have always found it impossible to be angry with Dicky when he is in one of his irresponsible moods.

"That's a good girl." He captured my hand, tucked it within his own, and we went down the street in this ridiculous, lover-like fashion, to which, however, I found even my trained fastidiousness making no objection.

"As long as you're behaving yourself so nicely," he began a few minutes later, "I don't mind telling you that you're invited to the ancestral southern home, too."

"I guessed as much," I replied demurely, "especially as Leila has been urging me to go down with her for weeks. I am afraid we will be rather a large party even for a Carolina aunt's hospitality—Leila, Edith, Alfred, his mother, you and I."

"Not forgetting our dear old friends, Rita Brown and Majah Hughie Grantland," Dicky drawled.

VALLEY MEDICS HOLD SESSION

Films Showing Effects of Social Diseases Shown To Physicians

The doctors of the Willamette valley never had a bigger or more delightful day than Tuesday the 18th, when the Central Willamette Medical association came as the guests of the Tri-County association, composed of the medical men of Marion, Polk and Yamhill counties. Sixty people sat down to the elaborate luncheon at the Commercial club Tuesday evening—about 20 being wives or daughters of the medics, and all the others being practitioners in some form of medicine or surgery.

An afternoon session preceded the big dinner, at which various matters of interest to the profession were presented. Music was served during the dinner, by the Music week-committee.

Two series of films were shown by Dr. J. E. Wagner, representing the Oregon state board of health; the films relating to the control and treatment of social diseases. The films were a revelation to even many of the practitioners who come through experience to know how far the careless action leaves its outward mark on the evil-doer—and on the generations to follow.

Corvallis Methodists Win Sunday School Contest

The three months attendance contest that has been carried on between the Sunday schools of the First Methodist churches of Salem and Corvallis came to a close for announcement, Easter Sunday. The Corvallis school won, with an average attendance of 597, with the Salem school average of only 569. The Salem school had an attendance of 706 a week ago Sunday, the last day of the contest, but it was never quite large enough to win a victory. A similar contest is now being staged between the First Christian Sunday schools of Salem and Corvallis, is still in favor of Salem, though the rivalry isn't over, and the Corvallis gospel warriors are going out after recruits in a whirlwind campaign.

The man who paid $3000 for five barrels of colored water might have got stuff speeded with wood alcohol. He is alive and healthy. Probably he is still ahead of the game.
