Mr. R. C. Glover,
Salem, Oregon,
My dear Sir:
I have learned that Congressman Willis C. Hawley of your state has opposition for the Republican nomination for Congress. To us, who know him here, this seems almost incomprehensible. Mr. Hawley has grown in power and influence since he has been here until he has reached the unquestioned position of being one of the real leaders of Congress.

His work is not of the spectacular kind that usually results in much talk on the floor of the House and little else. The most important work in Congress is done in committees. Mr. Hawley, several years ago, reached membership on the greatest committee of Congress, the Ways and Means Committee, and I know by actual observation, being myself a member of that committee, that his work in the committee room has been tireless and of a very high order. In my judgment it would be a misfortune to the country as a whole and especially so to the state of Oregon, for whose interests he was always on the alert, if Mr. Hawley should not be returned to Congress.

Very sincerely yours,
JOHN Q. TILSON.

April 26th, 1922

There is no need to worry. Mr. Hawley will be returned. Mr. Tilson is one of the big men of Congress. He was born in the South. He graduated from Yale in 1891 and from the Yale Law School in 1893. He became one of the leading lawyers of New Haven. During the war with Spain he served as a second lieutenant in the Sixth United States Volunteer Infantry. He responded to the call of the President on June 20, 1916, and served on the Mexican border. He went to France and served there as Colonel of a Connecticut regiment, which was a part of the famous Yankee Division of hard fighters. When he returned home with his regiment his people of the Third Connecticut Congressional district sent him back to Congress. He served his state in the Legislature from the New Haven district, and was Speaker of the Connecticut House of Representatives during the session of 1907.

So Mr. Tilson knows a good and industrious and patriotic and efficient man when he sees one and observes him in action.

It is important and to the point that the people of Oregon's First Congressional district are as a whole intelligent and reading and observing people, and they are well aware of the truth of all Congressman Tilson says; and they propose to make it all but unanimous for Mr. Hawley, at the May primary and the November election polls.

NOT QUITE SO BAD IN OREGON

One of the agents of the State Board of Control who goes around checking up things for the administration has a specially built six-cylinder car with electrical equipment. It has an electric cigar-lighter, curling irons and chafing dish. There is also a fancy clock and a silver bouquet-holder. Now all the state employees want cars of this caliber. The pay-roll patriots chafe for autos equipped with chafing dishes. The state is paying for the upkeep of some 800 cars now on behalf of the administration and if they must all be equipped with electric toasters and curling irons it will take something more than that $93,000,000 to run the machine. Presently we will have a demand for a manicure girl with every car.—Los Angeles Times.

It is not quite so bad up here in Oregon; California is larger, and the piling up of commissions has been going on longer down there—

And we had a killing of commissions some years ago up here.

We have altogether too many, however, and there must be another killing, and it must be more complete—

The commission abuse must be dug up by the roots. There is only one way to make it complete, and that is with a cabinet form of government, the head of each department being responsible to the Governor, and the Governor being responsible to the people—

Like the Illinois form; like the Washington form, under which there has been effected a reduction of 50 per cent of the general fund state tax levy.

Promises will not do it. There must be a program, and there must be performance.

A great deal of state money is being wasted in Oregon, and there is no way to stop a large part of the waste, under commissions that have no adequate check or control under the present system—

The only way is to get the control; to centralize it.

This will give an economical and business conduct of the state's affairs. It is to be presupposed that the office of Governor must be in strong, new, clean hands, directed by a clear head. The friends of George A. White think they have picked the man for the job—and he stands flatly for the proposed new deal; the proposed cabinet system. Already there is an enrollment of nearly 16,000 names in White for Governor Clubs, committed to the new deal; and the list is growing very fast.

Chinese invading army stopped at gates of Peking. They cannot peek in.

Joe Tumulty, it is understood, is at work on a new book entitled, "Woodrow Wilson as I Thought I Knew Him."

One day France is to quit the Geneva conference and the next she is going to stick. Our money goes on the latter proposition.—Exchange.

In a whirlwind speaking campaign that he is making of a state Norblad is assailing Hawley's poor record, with the result that he has been rallying a support of surprising proportions to his candidacy," says a writer in the Portland Telegram. Tooh! as an Englishman would say, or bosh! and other things, as some Americans would say. There is nothing to it but cold air. It does not arise to the semblance even of hot air.

Former Vice-President Marshall says that no man or woman who cannot speak or write the English language should be allowed to become an American citizen. This is a mighty job at the Democratic vote in this country.—Los Angeles Times.

GIFTED MEMORY

The most retentive memory in America is said to belong to a native Indian of the Yakima tribe. His brain cells register everything he sees or hears. During the war he served with the army in France and was of much value in carrying long messages, observing positions or checking supplies. When he was in camp he could call off a regimental roster and catalogue every item of equipment without any note or memorandum. On one occasion, after making a full report of observations to the extent of a thousand items or more, he repeated the full text of a lecture he had heard the night before. This was in the presence of the lecturer himself and was pronounced perfect. A great memory offers a capacity for great pleasure, but a good forgettery is also a handy thing to have. The retentive mind may become embarrassing.

SUNNY OUTLOOK

Sun Foo, the son of Sun Yat Sen, is the first mayor of the revolutionized city of Canton. It sounds rather sunny, but there are problems ahead that may wreck the experiment. The first mayor is 32 years old and was educated in an American school—the University of California. Sun, the sunny son of Dr. Sun, was trained right, any way.

THE DIME NOVEL

The creator of Nick Carter is dead by his own hand. He had led a feverish and adventuresome life and much of the lurid fiction of his stories was reflected from his own career. In his later days he tried hard to get away from Nick Carter, but neither his publishers nor his readers would permit it. They wanted Nick Carter and he kept Nick Cartering until he could stand it no longer. He had made and spent a fortune in developing the character of his rugged hero and was aware of his work. It wasn't literature and yet it had its place and a sustained demand. After all, Nick Carter had a lot of friends who never heard of Carlyle.

OWNING THE LAND

The soviet government continues to deny the right of private ownership of land in Russia. We should worry. Who wants to own any land in Russia? No man clothed in his right mind would trade a lot in West Salem or Sublimity for the whole Nevsky Prospekt—or whatever they call it. There will never be any real estate boom in Moscow while Lenin and Trotsky are still cluttering up the place.

THE DEAD ONES

It seems that the pursuit of the Plesiosaurus has been officially abandoned. The expedition gathered some legends concerning this prehistoric monster, but disclosed no actual footprints. There was no proof that he had passed that way for thirty centuries. Certainly there was no sign of present life. The man who thought he had seen the mammoth outlined in the dusk admitted that it might have been a dead tree. It looks as if the Plesiosaurus would stay defunct.

BEARING THE WORLD

It is quite possible to put a girde 'round the world in forty minutes. The other day a message was sent from Fort Sam Houston to Nome, Alaska, and returned in less than 70 minutes. In that time it journeyed by airplane, by pony courier, by telegraph, by wireless, by submarine cable, by telephone and y motorcycle. It was repeated back at Fort Sam Houston without an error in a little more than an hour. It had traveled more than ten thousand miles and passed through a number of hands. It looks as if the race were not likely to perish for want of information. If the radio doesn't catch 'em, something else will.

Peggy Plans A Party

"Oh," said Peggy, "I'm sleepy as can be, but it's a happy kind of sleepiness."
"I should think you would be sleepy," said her mother, "having been out in the open air all afternoon. What all did you do?"
"It was an Indian powwow," Peggy explained. "We wanted to have a hike, but we wanted it to

"So she went along with us. It was fun hiking. We just kept a good, steady walk, and we sang some as we went along. We stopped every once in a while to look at flowers, but we didn't gather any, on account of having no place to put them before they'd wilt. And we tried to name all the different birds we saw, too.

"We kept on walking until late afternoon, and then we found a nice place to camp on the edge of a woods. There was an open space there where we could have our powwow, too. We stacked up our packs, because it wasn't time to eat yet.

"Then Miss Ryerson got us all in a circle and showed us how to do a ceremonial dance, and a war dance, and some kind of a sun dance. They were very queer dances, but fun to do. And being out there in the country we could yell all we wanted to where we were doing war dances.

"After that we scattered and gathered wood and made a fire just like real Indians, to cook our supper. We hadn't brought along regular picnic truck—lettuce sandwiches, hardboiled eggs, and that sort of stuff. We had bacon and wieners and rolls for making our sandwiches. We made coffee, too. And we fried eggs in with the bacon. We had brought along potato chips and pickles and olives.

"Of course we ended up by toasting gobs of marshmallows in the nice coals. We had fixed long pointed sticks for roasting the wieners, and these we used for the marshmallows.
"We spread out our blankets close to the fire and sang a lot. A couple of the girls had brought along their 'ukes,' so we had music. We sang some Indian songs, too, that Miss Ryerson taught us.

"Then we started back to town because we wanted to get back before it was really dark. We 'whoop-ed' like Indians all the way back.

"We're going to have some other hikes with a purpose later on. On one we'll wear middie and bloomers and learn folk dances, and on another we'll go with our English teacher who's going to coach us in an outdoor play. Don't you like the idea?"
"Indeed I do," said her mother. "Goodnight, Minnehaha."

ONE REEL YARNS

A DUMB TRICK

Erwin and Fred were going home on the street car together. Not that this was unusual. They went everywhere together. They hardly ever saw one without the other. What Erwin couldn't think of doing, Fred could, and the other way around.
The street car was crowded. They were too late to get a seat, and had to hang to the same strap. Suddenly with his free hand Erwin began to make funny motions. He twisted his fingers about quickly in the queerest way. Then Fred caught on. He began to make the same sort of gestures, his face very sober.

People about them began to notice.
"There's a couple of boys from the deaf and dumb school," Fred heard one lady say. "Isn't it a shame? Such fine, bright boys, too." Erwin and Fred continued their supposed conversation with their fingers as though unaware of any one else.
Even the conductor was interested. "Yeh," he said to a man near him, "it's surprising how those kids get around. Saturday afternoons like this they let them go down to the museums by themselves. Just this afternoon there were three other boys on this car."
The two boys were having trou-bit keeping from laughing as they listened to the comments on their appearance. Then some one touched them on the shoulder. It was the conductor, and they realized that the car had stopped.

"Here's where these kids get off for the school," he was saying, "but they don't seem to know it."
He made signs to the two boys, but they looked at him blankly.
"They're green ones," he said, "but I can't carry them past." He took a firm hold on their elbows and marched them out of the car. There was nothing to do but go. And so Erwin and Fred alighted in front of the deaf and dumb school.

Away went the car, and Erwin and Fred looked after it. They were only half way home. Their pockets were empty. So they put their hands in them and started gloomily down the street.
