MEMORIAL DAY

An Appeal to the Public In a very useful book entitled, "Thoughts for the occasion," may be found a brief but interesting history of Memorial Day, which is worth taking note of.

"It is a well ascertained fact that on April 13, 1862,, just one year after the fall of Fort Sumpter, the wife and daughters of the chaplains of the Second Michigan Infantry Volunters, and another lady decorated the graves of a number of Union soldiers buried on Arlington Heights, Va. The press made favorable mention of it. Several State Governors officially commended it. Finally, on May 5, 1868, General John A. Logan, then Commander-in-Chief of the G. A. R., in country and he must pledge fealty have committees at work, and general orders designated May 30 as Memorial Day and now to the soviet principles in order they will be glad to take care of for 54 years the G. A. R. have faithfully obeyed the order in to maintain his power over the your bundles for you. Just leave the spirit of Logan's words:

"If other eyes grow dull, and other hands slack, and other hearts cold in the solemn trust, ours shall keep it well as long as the light and warmth of life remain to us. Let us then at the time appointed gather around their sacred remains and garland the passionless mounds above them with the choicest flowers of springtime; let us raise above them the dear old Flag which they saved from dishonor, while a survivor of the war remains to honor the memory of departed comrades."

The American Legion has officially recognized May 30 as Memorial Day, and this act insures its observance for at least another half century.

But as years have passed many people have come to regard the day as a fit time to dress and decorate the graves of the departed members of their families, until it has become backbone of Europe and would almost a national festival of flowers. Certainly nothing be feeding half the continent incould be more to be desired and rejoiced over, for the respect shown to the memory of the dead marks the level of stead of starving herself.
