Hot Yesterday—When Mark Twain remarked that "People have been talking bad about the weather for a thousand years, but no one seems to have done anything about it," he had in mind the hot time of yesterday. It was the hottest day of the year, the thermometer reaching up to 96 degrees. The highest point heretofore this year was 91 degrees. Yesterday, the fat men were oozing carefully along in the shade, wherever a little shelter could be had; or perspiring like a leaky barrel where they had to dash out into the sunshine. One could track a fat man anywhere yesterday, by the sploshy perspiration and the wheezy language. It was tough on the plump people, but it was the growin'est day of the whole year. The night was cool, and as soft and silky as the fuzz on a butterfly's wing. Some weather! Red Mars shines with almost torrid brilliancy in the southern heavens but he comes up almost too late to have a sinister effect on the early birds who get to bed during rational hours; there is small prospect of war, even though Mars is in the ascendancy and it's hotter'n hot.

prize, after a close contest with Company A, the "big girls." They execute military drill, without arms, in a delightful and striking manner. The boys drilled with the old Springfield rifles belonging to the school. Rather curiously, the government hasn't furnished arms for the school, and a few years ago the lads worked for the railroad grading contractors and got enough money to buy the guns from the government. Some of the lads who drilled yesterday were pretty light to be totting the ponderous old 45-70 artillery, but they did it manfully and accurately. Company A, the older boys, won in this event.

Athletics Today Today there will be the interclass athletics for the forenoon. A military dress parade is scheduled for the afternoon, but after the face pace already set for commencement week festivities, they may call off the parade and just roost around in the park and try to catch up sleep and rest.

The annual graduation exercises come tonight, which are open to the public, and everybody interested is urged to come. Governor Olcott is to present the diploma to a class of 26, and State Superintendent J. A. Churchill is to deliver the annual address. Just before the program, Mr. and Mrs. Hall are to serve dinner to Governor and Mrs. Olcott, Mr. and Mrs. Churchill, and Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Koser, the menu and serving being arranged by the junior girls as one of their finest annual privileges.

Many visitors went through the school departments yesterday and will have the same privilege again today. Thursday is "jolly-up" day for the students.

At the direction of her father, she was entertained in New York, Chicago and Hot Springs, but, according to friends of the family, took but little interest in society. Often it was said it required the combined persuasion of her older brother and sister, Harold Jr., and Muriel to get her to attend dances and other little affairs given in her honor. Although their homes in Chicago were scarcely three blocks apart, Mathilde saw little of her mother.

Father Makes Decision Then, according to family friends, having fully decided that the marriage was essential to his daughter's happiness, Mr. McCormick took the final step toward clearing away all legal barriers, he seeking to have himself named his daughter's guardian so that she could marry with his consent alone. The first steps had hardly been taken when Mathilde in New York announced her readiness to sail for Europe. Her plans were cancelled at the last moment, however, when she received word that her mother had had the guardianship proceedings reopened on the ground that she had not been given legal notice.

With a stylish little brown suit in hat and a gray turtleneck suit, replacing the little girl costume of tweed which she usually wore in traveling, Mathilde rushed back from New York and into her father's arms. A family council followed in preparation for the legal battle in court over the issue raised by Mrs. McCormick.

23 MORE MEN WANTED IN CO. F

That Number Will Bring Salem's Militia Company Up to A Good Showing

How many of the great number of people who saw Salem's militia company in the parade yesterday realized that seven of the members had joined the company on Monday night?

The way they kept step with the men who saw service in France and have been subjected to severe drilling for years was a surprise to the new men themselves, and pleasing to the older members of the company. It showed fast work on the part of the officers of the company who have that part of the work under their charge.

The whole of the work of the company looked like finished work to the outsiders, and elicited favorable comment all along the line of march.

Twenty-Three More Men. Twenty-three more men are needed at once, to give Salem a very creditable militia company—23 more good men. There are 68 members now, who are active and competent, and "up on their toes."

Nine new men were ready to sign up on Monday. Eight of them were signed up; the other one had to be rejected, on account of a physical defect.

More than 23 more good men can be used, but that number, one of the corporals told the reporter yesterday, would bring the number up to the point of making a most creditable showing.

The reporter promised to "tell the world."

Men joining up must largely "sell themselves" on the proposition. There are hundreds available; out of this number the 23 are wanted.

Escaped Patient Causes Sensation at Tualatin

Frank J. Hammersley, an inmate of the state hospital for the insane, was returned Saturday after having escaped and caused much of a sensation at Tualatin.

Hammersley took the train first to Tualatin and then back to Tonquin. Next he walked back to Tualatin and demanded entrance into the William McAfee store at 3 o'clock a. m. He informed a man sleeping in the store that he had a gun and a Billy and wanted in. The man gave the alarm after leaving the building through a rear door, and when he returned with the town marshal found that the intruder had broken the store windows with rocks.

Not knowing he was an insane man the marshal fired a shot at Hammersley that did not take effect. Hammersley succeeded in striking the officer with a rock. Hammersley then jumped into a creek from which he was taken by others who had joined in the chase.

MUD SMOTHERS FIRE IN MINES

After Five Years' Struggle Montana Copper Beds Are Reclaimed

ANACONDA, Mont., May 30.—Fighting fires in mines is a slow, tedious job and since the dawn of mining has been considered almost a hopeless undertaking. Rich mines in many parts of the world have been burning for generations, their rich stores of wealth being guarded from the hands of man by a barrier of deadly gases and rock walls white with the heat of fires smoldering beyond.

But underground fires no longer are to be considered unquenchable, as in the Butte district a process of fire fighting has been developed by the Anaconda Copper Mining company which is salvaging an ore body of tremendous extent. Fires that have been burning for 15 years in three connecting mines are being smothered under a million tons of mud!

Valuable Ore Saved By the end of 1922 two million tons of metalliferous ore, containing, according to expert estimates, at least 80,000 tons of copper, once more will be accessible.

A great part of this store of wealth already has come within the reach of the miners and not only that, but a large area which heretofore has been inaccessible because of poisonous gases now is being worked.

The process of fighting the subterranean fire as developed is not complicated. It is an adaptation of an idea evolved in 1884 by fire fighters at a coal mine in the Schuylkill region of Pennsylvania. Sand, decomposed rock and other materials which came originally from the stopes and were discarded as tailings in the process of copper extraction, simply have been turned back into the fire area.

Water Aids Work Water, which in many cases has proved its uselessness as an extinguisher of underground fires is used for transportation. It conveys the tailings in the form of silt down to the fire regions. 1200 to 2200 feet underground, where the soup-like slime fills the abandoned drifts, crosscuts, and stopes, and literally smothers the fire.

Through complicated, the task of extinguishing the fires in the Butte district has been difficult and long, beginning in the fall of 1917 and continuing until now, employing 250 men on a 24-hour shift.

Fair Sitter—Won't you please idealize me a trifle, Mr. Dauber? Great Artist—Yes, I'll fix you so your own mother won't know you.
