A Business Training Is Essential

Don't think for a moment that you can succeed in the business world without a business straining.. It can't be done. You may secure the training in either of two ways, through long, tedious days of hard, practical experience or through a few months' concenbusiness college.

Practical experience is necessary to success, but how much better it is to build upon a solid foundation laid in a good business college than to put in years learning the first fundamentals of business.

Let us show you how our courses will put you in a position where you can turn your practical experience to the best account.

Brunk Will Judge-

Thomas Brunk, well known Poland China breeder and general hog expert of Salem, has consented to go this fall to serve as judge of swine at the Spokane Interstate fair, this being the 12th consecutive year he has filled a similar responsible position in this great livestock exposition. Mr. Brunk had not intended to carry on his ring judging again this season. It is hard, exacting work, and he feels that he has earned the chance to enjoy his own home and farm; but they keep coming for him to some of these big fairs, and he finally consented to go.' Also, he will serve

Peach harvest will onen on the Beaver Island Fruit acres, on the Williamette river six miles north of Salem, some time about the last of the coming week. They have more thun 50 acre; of this delectable fruit, which comes in 18 distinct varieties. They hegin ripening early in July, the Triumph being the first and the Strawberry being a second early variety; then they come along in stair-step fashion clear up to the middle of October. The peachpickers in an assorted orchard like this have an all summer's

Peaches Good Crop

The peaches are making a splendid crop this year, in this particular orchard as well as in other well-cared-for orchards in the county. Not many peaches survived the big freeze two years ago, but those that did, are looking like gold mines or oil wells The Beaver Island people plan to put out more fruit, and then insure it by installing an irrigation plant. Their place is overflowed in the highest stages of the river. It was all under water for a time last November, when the peak of the Willamette flood came. But it is like other lands anywhere—one flooding isn't a perpetual watering; so they plan to put in a pump system and supply water from the river during the summer drought.

Hose System Used They expect to adopt a canvashose system of distribution, as the soil is of such characte; that it would be almost impossible to get the water to distribute through a ditch system, as the soil swallows it up like Jonah and the whale. They believe that it will be possible to insure from 25 to 50 per cent more crop, taking a long series of years, by adopting irrigation for the years when it is needed.

Funeral of George Gans Held at Rigdon Parlors

Funeral services for the late George Gans of Salem were held Saturday afternoon at the Rigdon parlors. Rev. H. D. Chambers of the Episcopal church, the pastor of the Gans family, preached the funeral sermon. Chemeketa lodge, O. O. F., of which organization Mr. Gans had been a member, furnished the pallbearers and conducted the ritual ceremonles at the grave. Interment was in the Odd Fellows cemetery.

Mrs. Fred Lockley of Portland, Mrs. Arthur Gale of Bandon, and George Gans, Jr., of Oakland, Cal. came to attend the last rites over their father. One daughter, Mrs. Reba Mountain of Zellah, Wash., failed to arrive in time. She was the only one of the immediate family not present for the funeral services. Mrs. Gans, worn out with watching and care, is reported very ill from the shock. The family has many friends in Salem, where they have lived for more than
