That she had donned the wonderful wrap not because of real need, but because of the chance meeting Maj, Grantland while arrayed in it, I well knew. That she would contrive to attract as much attention from the other passengers as she possibly could I knew also. The fact that this course would make it impossible for me to put the cloak on during the trip south was, I was sure. one of her motives in thus flaunting her apparent ownership of the cloak. As the door closed behind her I smiled sardquically at the thought that her energy in this particular direction was wasted, I wasn't apt to put on the wrap, the

"Richard Smond has been awake for hours," she went on I smiled at her unconscious exaggeration, for I well knew that more than a few minutes of rest-lessness upon the boy's part would have sent his devoted grandomther scurrying to find a porter through whom she could send a peremptory summons for

"He must be starving, the poor lamb," she continued, ignoring the fact that Junior with his baby arms around my neck was chattering baby talk and laughing contentedly. "Why didn't you bring his stuff with you instead of having to make a trip back for

I nearly dropped Junior in my astonishment, and turned a bewildered face toward her. "Why! what do you mean?" I asked. "I didn't have Junior's food with me." Her face turned positively gray with frightened anger. "Don't you dare to stand there and tell me a thing like that!" she said. "I gave it to Richard to carry out to the taxi, and they must have taken it out with your things, for when I went through my baggage this morning that grip was not here. You certainly don't mean that there's no foud for this child this morning!"

Silverton Company Finishes Strawberries—Logans Coming in Fast

SILVERTON, Ore, July 13 -Special to The Statesman, 1--- The strawberry season at the Silverton Food Products company has closed with a total pack of 75 tons. At present the loganberry A glance at my watch had told me pack is in full swing with an average of 15 tons per day. The largest individual- contributor of who has 50 acres and brings in about 6 tons per day. It is expected that the loganberry season will last about two weeks longer Other fruits which are being received at present are red and black raspberries and Royal Aun cherries: Since the close of the strawberry season the canners crew has been cut down from 110 employees to 47. It is said that the evergreen yield is promising this year and
