

ONCE A LION, ALWAYS A LION

Members Accept Code of Ethics of Organization as Standard of Living

There is no milestone in the history of man marking the beginning of Lionism, which man can point out and say "Thus began Lionism." It has been sustained throughout the ages by the finer instincts and high aspirations of mankind.

When a man becomes a Lion he subscribes to the tenets of Lionism; the Lion's principles become his principles; he accepts the Lion's code of ethics as his standard of living. To all these he gives part of his vitality; his mentality and his ambitions.

Now the question arises when a Lion moves from the city where he has been established and where he has become identified with Lionism should he be comelled to drop from the Lions' field; should he lose his identity as a Lion? -- the Lions' creed to be a Sunday-go-to-meeting creed—a transient, temporary affair? Is he not to make the code of ethics his standard of living regardless of what city he resides in? If his changing cities means Lionism loses an adherent and a member loses Lionism, then it must follow only that Lionism is to be confined only to certain cities. Is this limit to be placed on a thing so limitless?

He Doesn't Change
The symbol of the organization—the strong, courageous Lion—never, never changes. He is a Lion forever. He cannot change his color or his name. Why should not our members be Lions forever in true accordance with the standards set for them? If they were proud to be a Lion in one city why should they be deprived of this privilege because of locality?

If every member found worthy of Lionism remains intact within the fold, regardless of what city he may live in, think of the numerous possibilities; the many avenues this would open up for the growth of Lionism! One emblem, one pin alone, might be the cause of a new club in a city. It will not only benefit the Lion himself

E. F. SMITH
For a good many years "Smithy" was a barber and known to every big and little shaver in Salem. Some years ago he decided to scrap his tonsorial profession and launch forth as a life insurance salesman. This move proved a fortunate one, and now Smithy is firmly established as one of the real go-getter salesmen for the New York Life Insurance company.

KINDNESS IS LION'S TRAIT

Members Strive to Expand Usefulness and Field of Service to Others

BY EWEN W. CAMERON
President of Lions International.

The day of the individual is past and more and more we are coming to recognize the fact that we have a collective responsibility which is even more potent than our individual responsibility. Through the medium of such organizations as the Lions club, and similar civic clubs, we are getting together to study the needs of the community in which we live, analyzing the individuals who compose it, and devising ways to be of greater service in helping promote the greatest good to the largest number possible.

The English speaking people for many generations have used the Lion to symbolize strength, steadfastness, courage and service. The founders of the International Association of Lions clubs were true to the traditions of their race when they chose the Lions as the name of our organization.

Four Distinct Phases.
There are four distinct phases in which Lionism has an ever-widening circle of influence. The first is the individual contact through which the Lion is developing friendships and making new acquaintances, thereby expanding his usefulness and field of service. The second is the influence of the club in his own locality, where it helps to make the town a better place in which to live. Third, is the district organization, competing in friendly rivalry for the advancement of the Lion spirit. The national and international features are not only creating a better citizenship, but also promoting a clearer understanding among the English-speaking peoples.

Better Citizenship Object.
Lionism stands for that which every loyal citizen would uphold—a better citizenship. Therefore it is attracting to its membership men who have won success in their various fields of endeavor and who appreciate the fact that the Lions club stands for the finest principles to which men can subscribe.

The International Association of Lions clubs, through its president, extends greetings to the Salem den on the occasion of the presentation of its charter, and sends the best of wishes to the club and each and every individual member.

C. F. BREITHAUPT
Lion Breithaupt has for the past 10 years been a florist. When asked to say something regarding himself for the Lionist edition of the Statesman, "Bright" Hop roared—"Say it with flowers." Before he became a florist Breithaupt was secretary and treasurer of the Benton Water company, Richland, Wash. He is a graduate of Northwestern college, Naperville, Ill., and Capital City Commercial college, Des Moines, Iowa. He is now owner of the Salem Greenhouses and the former C. B. Clancey florist shop at 123 North Liberty street.

City a better place in which to live. Mere dollars cannot measure the great works that this club will do for its city, state and nation, throughout the years to come.

Lionism is rapidly coming into its own in the Pacific northwest. Portland, Spokane, Tacoma, Seattle, Everett and Vancouver, B. C., now each has a flourishing, roaring club in their midst. The Salem club completes the circle, and the other cities in Oregon will shortly be asked to come into the fold.

No thought of selfish gain enters into the securing of a Lion membership—rather in the thought dominant of being of help and rendering service to their fellow man and community.

Lionism, as Big Bill Barlow of the downtown club of New York city says, "makes a man more man," and after close contact with Lions in different sections of this country and Canada, I agree with Bill.

Lions clubs in the Pacific northwest will be able to do great good in just creating a feeling of friendliness for the benefit of the common good between sister cities and eradicating all small, petty jealousies which have so retarded development.

PETER ANDRESEN
Lion Andresen specializes in chickens; also eggs, cream, veal, and other products of the farm. He conducts a general commission business and through the policy of square dealing he has built up a thriving trade.

E. F. SMITH
For a good many years "Smithy" was a barber and known to every big and little shaver in Salem. Some years ago he decided to scrap his tonsorial profession and launch forth as a life insurance salesman. This move proved a fortunate one, and now Smithy is firmly established as one of the real go-getter salesmen for the New York Life Insurance company.

RUSSELL F. BONESTEEL
Selling Dodge automobiles occupies most of Lion Bonesteel's time. He is sales manager for the Bonesteel Motor company, exclusive Dodge dealers in Salem. Although young in years Russ is old in business experience, he has been actively connected with the above firm for the past five years. Bonesteel came to Salem from Tigard, Ore., and is a former O. A. C. man.

LIONISM GROWS IN NORTHWEST

District Governor Bigelow Says Salem Will Benefit from Activities

By RAY E. BIGELOW.
District Governor Washington, Oregon, British Columbia.
Salem can be congratulated upon her now taking unto herself a Lions club, a club composed of men of strong character who, through the medium this new club offers, will give freely of their time and money for civic service and interest themselves in any institution that has for its purpose the making of the Cherry

HARRY W. SCOTT
Who doesn't know "Scottie"? Every Salem kid who rides a bicycle and every motorcycle enthusiast in the state and nearly every other citizen of Salem call him by his first name. For seven years this popular Lion has been selling and repairing motorcycles and bicycles in Salem. When the war came along Scottie shut up shop and joined the army and just as soon as he could rid himself of the cooties and say hello to the folks after the war was over up went his sign and there he was busy and smiling on the job again. Harley-Davidson motorcycles and bicycles, tires and accessories are the special features of Scott's business.

The ever widening circle of good Maxwell admirers is a tribute both to its superb beauty and its reliable, economical performance.

The conviction is rapidly spreading that only in this car can there be found such sound value.
