No Labor Day Program—
At a well attended meeting of the union organizations of the city last night, it was decided to hold no special demonstration for Labor day, September 4. There will be races and probably various picnics at the state fair grounds that day, and the unions were invited to join in and make it a general celebration. As some of the individual unions, and many of the individuals, had already made plans for the day, and it was felt to be impossible to insure a general attendance and participation in the parade, it was voted to give it up altogether.

Gus Anderson Returns—
Gus Anderson, still as volatile and quicksilverish and irrepressible as ever, is back in Salem for a few days visit with his mother and the rest of the family. He spent the past year in Northwestern university, Chicago, getting his master's degree after graduating from Willamette university, and carrying on a law course looking to admission to the bar. His sister, Miss Hazel Anderson, was with him in Northwestern. She stopped in Kansas for a few days visit before returning to Salem. She has a contract to teach domestic science in the high school at Earlville, Ill., near Chicago, for the coming year. Her visit here at home will be very short, as she must return to her school duties. Mr. Anderson will return to Northwestern, about September 10.

Wolgamott Case Appealed to State Supreme Court

Transcript of appeal was received at the supreme court yesterday in the case of the state against Ernest S. Wolgamott, in which activities attributed to the Ku Klux Klan figured prominently at Medford.

Wolgamott was convicted of having liquor in his possession and was sentenced by Judge F. M. Calkins to serve two years in the county jail at hard labor. He filed a motion for a new trial, and a letter signed by the Ku Klux Klan was shortly afterward received by Judge Calkins warning him not to grant the new trial. Also a delegation from the Klan is said to have conferred with him at his home. The motion for new trial was not allowed, though there was nothing to indicate, it is said, that the judge was intimidated by the Klan.

Transcript of appeal was also received from Medford in the case of the state against James Edwards, who also was convicted for violation of the prohibition law.

Agreement Reached in Crook County Project

A tentative agreement has been reached between the state irrigation securities commission and the Crook county irrigation district whereby the commission will approve bonds covering the proposed construction of an irrigation system for 2500 acres in the project. Land values in the district, it is said, do not warrant certification of the entire issue of $189,000 asked for but the commission agreed to certify as far as the values warrant on condition that a contract be entered into by which the entire system would be constructed and the remainder of the payments made to the construction company after delivery of water on the land. The North Canal company is the constructing concern. The bonds to be certified include 4 per cent for attorney's fees.

FOUR CONCERTS REMAIN ON BILL

Salem Band Gains Reputation All Over Coast; Travelers Stop Here

Only four more concerts remain in the Salem band park concert series, the one tonight, two next week, and one the week following. Then it will be all off for more thousands of people who have been enjoying these delightful programs, than the casual Salemite might believe.

They have been coming in from Turner, Silverton, Woodburn, from Dallas, from every point of the compass, to hear these open air programs. The story has spread all up and down the coast. People make it a point to stop here on Tuesday and Friday nights to hear the band music as it is played in Salem. There is no other regular band service, anywhere in Oregon, it is believed; at least not so regular or so long a season or so effective an organization.

Some of the bandsmen have been engaged in this work for a long time. It is 24 years since John Graber first started to build up a genuine lasting concert band in Salem; it is that long since Director Oscar Steelhammer started in to make band music a thing of community life—though he did not start it in Salem quite that long ago.

The band gives its services for Memorial day, every year, without charge. Director Steelhammer says that money doesn't go with his organization on these patriotic, national holidays. Every year, the band visits all the state hospitals and institutions in or near Salem, to give free concerts at each place. As a money-making institution it is a failure.

But as an artistic success, it goes big. The boys would like to have a little more money appropriated, to make it possible to encourage a few more players, up to 30 at least. The present city appropriation doesn't go a great deal beyond paying the music bills and the hall rent and uniform expenses, says Director Steelhammer. If they could have players, and fill in all the chinks and gaps in instrumentation, they'd feel that band life was worth the living. It it still failed to pay an income, it would show an appreciation that would make them work like slaves to put it over.

The program for tonight, to be given if the weather permits, is as follows:

Punjab march, (Payne).
Selection "Amorita" from Caibulk's opera "Laurendeau."
Vocal—Mrs. Hallie Parrish Hinges (Havana).
Popular numbers: "Here Comes Dinah Belle of the Ball"; "Kiss Me Again"; "Dancing Fool."
Elk Chanters Band Accompaniment.

Selection "Faust" (Gounod).
Serenade Sabbath Morn (Jewell).
Selection "The Tenderfoot", (Hearts).
Col. Stuart March (Weldon).
Star Spangled Banner.

First Methodist Church Now Undergoing Repairs

Repairs that will cost nearly $500 are being made at the First Methodist church.

The ground floor, or Sunday school room, is being renovated, and re-ceiled with plaster board preparatory to repapering. All the old unsightly electric light wires will be covered by the new finish. Upstairs, the gallery floor has been painted, and all the news both of main floor and gallery varnished and renovated. The church is to be in readiness for the big session of the Oregon conference, that convenes here September 6. The summer time was chosen for doing the work, while the church was used the least of any time of the year during the series of union services in the park.
