BOYS PLAY IN HARD CONTEST

Figures Run Remarkably High in Doubles Match Here Yesterday

They've been telling about the iron endurance and dazzling speed of some of the national tennis stars and it's good dope. But Salem can run 'em ragged in endurance and give 'em a good chase for speed. The boys' championship doubles match in the tournament still going on brought out what looks like a national record for long play.

Ivan White and Howard Warrens playing Frank Shafer and E. Fisher, had to go to 15-13, 6-3 and 12-10 to win, or 33 sets in all to win the match. If there's another such record anywhere, it's up to somebody to trot it out and tell about it. Most matches go out with the winner having to take only six games in every series. Most of them, perhaps, couldn't play through such a grueling series.

Winners Modest
If any grown-up thinks it's easy to hit such a clip for so long a time, let him try it. The winners are modest chaps, but still they know they've established a record—and if they swaggered a bit, they'd have a right to do it. The losers, however, played a heroic game from the first stroke, and they lost by so narrow a margin that they take only a little less pride than the champs.

The whole tournament has produced some remarkably good tennis. Some of these little lads would drive grown men to drink trying to keep up with them on the courts. Some as pretty play as any one ever saw, has been put on all through the week, though the big doubles championship was the red hot king of all the shows.

Consolation Played
In the consolation doubles Creech and Kappahn defeated Barges and Lutz, only to meet defeat themselves at the hands of Bishop and Webb, 6-2, 6-5, 1-6, 6-4. This was a good game, though not quite so evenly matched as the championship series.

In the consolation singles, J Hansen defeated R. Strausbaugh, 7-5, 6-1. Following this, he won a harder, longer match with Bill East, 6-2, 4-6, 6-1. He will meet E. Hageman this morning at 6:30 for the consolation singles championship.

At 10:30 Ivan White is to meet E. Fisher for the last match in the semi-finals for the singles. These two lads have come through the tourney thus far, without losing a feather, and they are in fine trim for the singles battle. White's partner, Howard Waters, came close to the runner-up in the singles, but fell by the wayside a little short of the goal.

Other Matches Arranged
The winner of the White-Fisher match will meet R. Blatchford for the singles championship. In this match, if White should win, he will have the handicap of the five-hour fight of yesterday in the doubles, and the other match with Fisher in the morning. It looks like a pretty heavy stunt for the left-handed wonder of the tournament, but he's going to try them both. In Fisher he will have hard competition and Blatchford, fresh and undefeated, will prove a formidable antagonist for whoever gets the morning match to meet him.
