

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF

Oyster Season Opens— Sandwiching in between the lo-gans and the prunes, the oyster crop ripens today all over Amer-ica. Strange, perhaps, that it is so invariably so; but it is—the oyster always reaches its maturity the first day of September, the first month after the summer that has tan "r" in its spelling. It was the oyster and not the mock- ingbird that first sang "Twas in the mild Septem-ber-r-r!" Oysters are to be on sale in Salem, at once. They come from the Pacific fields, even ahead of the September date line they start shipping oysters from Olympia about August 25. Shipments are started from the New Orleans market on August 31. They go by express all over the country, and Salem will have eastern oys- ters about September 5.

Boys Cause Trouble— A report was turned in to the police that some small boys have taken up the habit of hanging on to trucks on Commercial street during the busiest traffic hours of the day, and that they run great risk of being caught and crushed in the crowded streets. The police have sworn themselves to make it their particular busi- ness to save the boys from the consequences of their own folly, and the next one they catch in the dangerous practice is liable to wonder why they invented switches and policemen and made boys small enough to get licked.

Starting With Round 3— The Liberty theater will run "The Leather Pushers". Re- member Round 3 at the Liberty today and tomorrow and the re- maining rounds Friday and Sat- urday of every other week.—Adv.

Miss Varley Injured— Miss Florence Varley, an em- ploye of the state industrial ac- cident commission, was injured yesterday when she was struck by an automobile at South Com- mercial and Leslie streets. The accident happened when Miss Varley got off a street car and stepped in front of the automo- bile, which was driven by H. L. Clark. It is said no blame is at- tached to Mr. Clark for the ac- cident.

Miami Melodians— 1922 Newport Casino success. Grand opening ball, Salem ar- mory, Saturday night.—Adv.

Poultrymen to Meet— A meeting of the Marion coun- ty local of the Pacific Coopera- tive Poultry Producers associa- tion will be held in Salem Sat- urday at the Commercial club, be- ginning at 1 o'clock p. m. It is said a number of questions of in- terest to the producers of blood- ed poultry will be taken up.
