SQUIRE EDGE GATE—A Nervous Witness Tries to Talk Fast

BILLY GARDEAU AND DAVIS MATCHED TO FIGHT IN SALEM

Clever Billy Gardeau, who boxes like a master and hits like a six-inch gun, is to be seen again in action in Salem September 28, Portland day at the state fair.

He is to take on Jack Davis of Seattle, one of the huskiest welterweights on the coast, for 10 rounds.

Those who have seen Gardeau know that he is a finished fighter who doesn't need to fear any of them. He can give and take, and escape from an awful lot of punishment.

Davis Hard Hitter. In Davis, however, he finds a rugged socker who rates as the hardest hit in the west. He is a brother of Travis Davis, one of the top-notchers, and much better known than Jack, who has been fighting for only about a year. Jack has been knocking 'em all dead up around Seattle. He has lost only one fight, to Battling Ortega, and he wouldn't do that now.

The two men will weigh in at about 149 pounds. Both have posted forfeits for their appearance. Both will be here for a week before the match, and will work out in the armory, where they can be seen in action.

Critics and Webb Appear. Frankie Crites of Newberg and Frankie Webb of Portland are likely to go on for the eight-round semi-final. They will be closely matched, at about 135 pounds, and both have good reputations.

Other Preliminaries. Two four-round preliminaries will be staged that are not yet definitely arranged. One of these may bring together Kid Teddy, interscholastic champion of Portland, at 135 pounds, and Young Newton of Independence. The other will be selected from local aspirants.

BOY TEAMS PLAY WITH PORTLAND

Intercity Tennis Titles Will Be Stake in Games At Metropolis

Salem is to invade Portland Monday to fight to a finish for the honors in the junior and boys' classes of tennis.

A tournament was being conducted in Portland at about the same time the Y. M. C. A. series was being played off in Salem. They divided into the same age classes so that there will be little advantage on either side except what the skill of the individual players may supply.

For Salem, Roy Okelberg and Louis West will compete for the doubles championship for the junior class between 16 and 18 years old. Okelberg will also fight for the singles honor, he having won first place in the Salem meet.

Ivan White and Howard Waters, the doubles champions in the Salem boys' class, will try for the intercity honors, and White will take on the Portland singles champion in his class. White and Waters, both of whom are only 14 years of age, are younger and smaller than the limit of their class, which comprises all boys up to 16 years, but they waded through the biggest competition in the Salem meet without asking odds for either age or size. Jerome Hansen, winner of the Salem consolation singles, will meet the Portland winner in the same class. Some of the consolation games were among the best of the Salem series, and Hansen ought to put up a fine fight.

The boys go expecting hard competition, but prepared to meet it with fortitude and skill, and determined that whoever wins has to prove his right to the verdict.
