

HOUSING BUREAU AGAIN THIS YEAR

State Fair Visitors Will Be Supplied With Rooms Throughout Salem

There will be a housing bureau maintained in the lobby of the Marion hotel for the listing of rooms in private dwelling houses throughout Salem...

This plan was found very successful during last year's fair, and the fair board was so pleased with the way in which Salem's visitors were handled...

Salem residents who have rooms that they desire to rent during fair week will have ample opportunity to telephone to the Marion hotel and list their rooms...

This bureau will be opened Friday, September 22, at 10 o'clock, preceding state fair, at which time a representative of the bureau will be on duty to take all listings of rooms...

Over 1200 rooms were found for state fair visitors through this listing bureau last year, and they were all listed in their praise of the service...

LABOR PRAISES BORAH'S ACTION

Fearless Criticism of Mr. Daugherty Brings Sharp Comment from O'Dowd

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—"Senator Borah deserves the thanks of every liberty loving American for his fearless criticism of the Daugherty-Wilkerson injunction," John O'Dowd, chairman of the central strike committee of the railway shophmen in the Metropolitan district, declared today in making public Senator Borah's reply to O'Dowd's request that the senator start in motion machinery for the impeachment of Attorney General Daugherty and Judge Wilkerson...

Senator Borah's reply said he was "thoroughly in sympathy with any plans to preserve unhampered the guarantees found in our constitution."

"Senator Borah has done more than any one man to make Daugherty eat his words," Mr. O'Dowd said. "The attorney general's retractions and side steps, however, merely clinch the case for his impeachment. He has proven by his own admission that he violated the law and the constitution. He stands self-convicted as an enemy of the people, guilty of gross misconduct in high office."

CAMPAIGN IS NOW IN FULL SWING (Continued from page 1.) tions laid out for Willamette university at the great meeting of the Methodist conference and the Willamette supporters, at the First Methodist church last night. The subscriptions, where not paid in cash or in shorter time than those proposed, will be made for 10 semi-annual payments, non-interest bearing if paid at maturity.

A force of trained educators and financial agents, regularly connected with the general board of education of the Methodist church, will handle the field work starting immediately after conference adjourns next week. They have raised more than $50,000,000 for similar campaigns in the past five years.

Committee Makes Report While the general plan of campaign has been talked over for weeks, it was only yesterday that it was formally adopted at a meeting of the executive committee of the university, the field force from the board of education, the executive officers of the university itself, and a few appointed laymen of Oregon. The results of the committee were made public at the meeting, as above stated.

None of the subscription money is payable until the whole amount is raised. If it fails of the amount nobody pays a dollar. The executive committee is the judge of the sufficiency of the pledges. If they fall in face or moral value the campaign will be a loss. The committee men who will direct the campaign are: President C. G. Doney, E. S. Collins of Portland, R. A. Booth of Eugene, Dr. B. L. Steeves of Salem, A. A. Lee and Paul Wallace of Salem, R. W. Smith, Rev. W. H. Youngson, Bishop W. O. Shepard, J. W. Day, and James Crawford of Portland, C. P. Bishop of Salem and the president of the Oregon Conference laymen, to be elected today.

Portland Editor Presides The meeting last night filled the church. It was perhaps the most notable service ever held in the historic old church—which is a proud boast, for there have been many great public services there in the past 60 years.

Edgar D. Piper, editor of the Oregonian, presided. He is an alumnus of Willamette, class of 1886.

Mr. Piper might be the seventh son of a seventh son, for he sees visions of big things that are still only in the eye of faith. He said that he used to sing in the choir of just back of where he presided last night. So did Editor Frank Irvine of the Oregon Journal, who spoke from the same platform Tuesday night, when he, too, spoke of Willamette as the father and mother and guide of all his early inspirations that have made him a great citizen of his state. That these two outstanding journalists should have come from the same school, is not a mere coincidence—it was the bright star of the school that trains men to think and to do big things for the country around them, that trains men to serve.

Piper Makes Address Mr. Piper himself gave a notable address, in declaring what he believes to be the growing stature of the university. He referred to the days when Willamette was almost the only worth-while college of the northwest, and contributed so astounding a proportion of good men to the making of the Pacific country—jurists, governors, state officials and editors and leaders of every walk of life. He spoke of the passing of the time when the school was worn as a personal jewel and adornment of the Methodist church, and the coming of the bigger day when, without lowering an iota of moral standards, a bit more of freedom from sectarianism was allowed.

Willamette doesn't now concern itself with what denomination one may claim, but it does concern itself mightily with what it can give in Christian education that fits for good citizenship," he said.

Dartmouth Commencement Seen The speaker told of his visit to Dartmouth college, in New Hampshire, last spring, the first time he had ever attended a college commencement in New England. The way they turned out, the old grads of the long ago, to live again in the splendid old school with traditions so strikingly like those of Willamette, was a revelation to him. The Dartmouth budget is about $1,000,000 a year. The annual gifts run above that—a year is lost that does not bring the college a million dollars in gifts. This kind of loyalty he commended to the alumni of every worth-while college, such as Willamette. He pledged himself to support the campaign, loyally, royally.

Shepard Eager to Go On being introduced by the chairman, Bishop W. O. Shepard spoke briefly on the outlook for the endowment campaign.

"The campaign is sold to this congregation at least," he said. "We're going to have a fine time, an dlot of fun in putting it over. This is the kick-off of a wonderful game, and in the words of one of our other good pastors, we're simply rarin' loose us—let us go!"

President E. C. Hickman, of Kimball School of Theology, commended the plan of campaign.

"This great organization has handled many campaigns, many of them looking far worse than ours, but it has never failed," he declared. "Maybe they will not do it your way, or mine; but it works. Let us enter in with a full heart. Kimball goes into the fight with coats off and sleeves unrolled."

Doney Draws Picture Dr. Carl G. Doney, president of the university, pictured the big endowment, and the new buildings, and the fine campus, as something easy and delightful to see; but still as the smaller, the less important part of what the future is to bring, the chance to serve more efficiently, more unselfishly, wherever men have need of help.

College Duty Told He saw the greater university as a chance for its people to have it a testimony to their own belief that a Christian education is fundamental to good citizenship. He presented the Christian college as one in which Almighty God is not an elective study, but a major course.

TWO HIGHWAYS WILL CONNECT

Redwood Road of California to Join With Roosevelt Coast Route

To connect the Roosevelt coast highway with the California highway system at the California-Oregon line, the California highway commission has designated the stretch between Crescent City and the boundary line between the states as part of the so-called "seven per cent system."

This was announced by the Oregon commission yesterday with the statement that it would be highly gratifying to the Oregon coast counties and particularly to the supporters of the Roosevelt Coast highway. The action of the California commission was at the request of the Oregon commission.

The California designation is in Del Norte county and covers a distance of about 20 miles. The present California highway system includes a road along the coast known as the Redwood highway, which swings to the northeast at Crescent City and connects with the Grants Pass-Crescent City road on the Oregon system.

In addition to these California connections there are three others, according to the commission: The connection of the Pacific highway south of Ashland; the connection of the Dalles-Columbia highway south of Klamath Falls, and a connection of the Lakewick-Bent highway south of Lakeview.
