HUNT BROTHERS CLOSE LONG RUN

Canning of Evergreens is Finished—All Packing Firms Are Busy

Hunt Brothers' cannery closed Friday night, its long run on evergreen blackberries. It has year, and the firm has a crop of the canned fruit stored away in their back rooms. They will run on ears for most of next week; also prunes, both of which products they are handling in enormous quantities. They expect to get to squash and their standard vegetables, about October 1.

The King's products company will work for two solid weeks on pears. The pears are all going to the cannery.

In the dehydration division enormous quantities of prunes are being used. The firm is putting through a few tomatoes, for the mixed vegetable soup stock; the big vegetable run will come a little later, when carrots, potatoes, celery, squash, and a few other things will come in and the plant has had a fine run on string beans, which are still being received in quantities for dehydration.

The King's company has been seriously inconvenienced by the nonarrival of some of its labels and cartons, and the great factory, the largest in the northwest, has been fairly jammed with products waiting for the final labeling for shipment. The company is putting out a cylindrical carton for its dehydrated fruits, that is double-sealed with waxed paper, making it impervious to dust and every possible infection. It makes a wonderfully neat package, that is reported to be taking the market by storm.

The Producers' Packing & Canning company is now running steadily on canned prunes, handling about 50 tons a day of the green fruit. The company remodeled and enlarged its plant last summer and has been able to handle a vastly increased quantity of fruit for the season because of these improvements. The company will take up apples later in the year. A few local ears were handled, but since the company handles only its own products, and does not go into the outside market to buy any class of fruit whatsoever, the line has been somewhat different from that of the other canneries.

The Oregon Packing company, the Twelfth Street cannery, has been running steadily on pears and prunes. The factory has maintained a working force of mer. The rebuilding of the fac almost 500 employes, this sum tory last spring, and the addition of a large amount of new equip-

Delinquent Tax Penalty Is Effective October 5

Warning of the delinquent tax penalty was sounded yesterday by Sheriff O. D. Bower for the benefit of property owners who wait until the 11th hour to meet these assessments. October 5 is the last regular day on which the second half payments can be accepted without the addition of the 1 per cent a month penalty. An additional penalty of 5 per cent also is added on November 5 to gether with the additional 1 per cent. The sheriff says that the books for the payment of taxes are open at all times during regular office hours and urges residents to pay now instead of waiting for the usual rush on the final day.
