EDITORIALS OF THE PEOPLE THE SCHOOL BILL Editor Statesman: In an open letter to Oblesky Young, by Mr. Will E. Purdy, regarding the so-called compulsory education bill, and which was recently published in The Statesman, I was greatly surprised by the statements issued by the defeated candidate for the nomination in the race for the governorship. Mr. Purdy's statements at first glance seem to smack of Bolshevism; but at a second glance, and then after a thorough reading, it is found that they are mere inanities. Mr. Purdy asks: "What right should a parent have in the matter (of educating his children) other than to decide with the child what universal subjects are preferable?" Now just what difference does it make what "universal subjects are preferable?" Since when have the subjects taught in the grade schools become elective? Since when can a child in the fourth grade choose what subjects he takes? What good then does it do for the parent to decide "with the child" what studies are preferable, if he cannot take the ones preferred? I would like to tell Mr. Purdy just what "right a parent should have in the matter of educating his child." First, the parents, and the parents only, should have the right of determining what school their child should attend.

FOR COUNTY NURSE Editor Statesman: I see that the question of the appointment of a county nurse is being discussed at this time. I beg the privilege of stating through your columns just two reasons why I favor such an appointment. 1. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This old proverb puts the case in a nutshell. The work of the county nurse is essentially one of prevention. It is her duty to test eyes, ears, nostrils, throats for those lurking disorders or deficiencies which threaten the whole future of the child. It is also her duty to discover indications of some contagion which may threaten the safety of the whole community. How could we spend money more wisely than in providing for such prevention? 2. "How much more is a man better than a sheep?" This proverb was given by the Master of us all. We do not begrudge the money to provide public inspectors for sheep, cattle, hogs and trees. Do we value these children less than these other possessions? I am a taxpayer, and I do not like high taxes any better than any of my fellow citizens. But I hope none of us will begrudge the trifle needed to ensure for our county this much needed service. E. S. HAMMOND.

OBITUARY Daniel Milton Calbreath, the beloved husband of Adaline Calbreath and father of Mrs. Dwight A. Hoag of Monmouth, passed away Sept. 20 in Portland where he had gone for treatments for an ailment that had caused him trouble for several years. While he was not rugged, he was in fair health when he left for Portland, September 14, hence his death was a shock to all. He crossed the plains in '86, driving a team for L. Skipton, who is the father of the wife of Prof. J. B. Horner of Oregon Agricultural college. He located near Philomath, where he married Miss Adaline Cushman. Mrs. Dwight A. Hoag of Monmouth is their only child. Dr. J. F. Calbreath of Portland and T. W. Calbreath of The Dalles are his brothers. Dr. Clair Brown and Ralph O. Brown of Falls City are nephews. Mr. Calbreath established a drug store in Buena Vista when that place was a thriving town, aspiring to become the capital of the state. Later he became agent for the Southern-Pacific railway company at Parker, where he remained until 1904, when he purchased an 80 acre tract near Olinmouth and became a breeder of Blue Andalusian chickens, selling chickens and eggs all over the west and many of the eastern states, and capturing most all the prizes at each state fair. He was a Mason and an Odd Fellow. His quiet, cheerful, uncomplaining life gave him many friends, who manifested this love, and their sympathy for the bereaved by an unusually bountiful and beautiful floral tribute, and in every other way possible. A master funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Lewis of the Evangelical church in the Monmouth community house September 22. The building was crowded in spite of the fact that it is vacation time in the "Normal" town, and it is the busy time of the year. Mrs. Maurice Butler, sweetly sang the solos. The pallbearers were Will Stockholm, William Riddle, Sr., Ira Powell.

Andrew C. Byrne, 22, and his brother, David, 18, arriving in New York after hiking from Pittsburgh in eight days by way of the Lincoln highway.

but NOT the right to withhold him from school. The education of the children belongs by right to their parents primarily and "per se," by the very fact that they are the parents. If the education belonged by right to the state, rather than to the parent, the state would then have to perform the other duties of feeding, clothing, and housing the children. Would Mr. Purdy advocate state control of children's clothing? Should the state determine whether or not a shirt should button down the front or up the back, or a hat or a cap be worn? In the next paragraph Mr. Purdy asks a question based on a supposition, which had no bearing whatever on the case. He asks: "If church, societies and individuals are allowed to open up private schools to teach our children without any state restrictions, why is it that the much despised Ku Klux Klan couldn't teach their methods and doctrines without state restriction or criticism?" I wonder if Mr. Purdy is aware of the fact that all private schools ARE under "state restriction" or rather, state supervision? If he does not, he is certainly assuming undue authority in attempting to explain the bill to anyone else. Mr. Purdy believes "that the state of Oregon should be held accountable by (for) the rising generation in the matter of good schools and this responsibility cannot be shifted onto the shoulders of any church, society, or individual," etc. "Then too," he asks, "what has religion got to do with the education of our children anyway?" In that last question Mr. Purdy evidently thought he was putting a "poser." He wasn't. That question was answered by George Washington, when he declared, "Whoever great the influence of a polite education is said to be on certain minds, reason and experience by no means allow us to expect that morality shall prevail in a nation of religious principles be excluded." But Mr. Purdy probably considers Washington a "back number." As for Oregon or any other state being responsible for the religious training of our children, that is strictly out of the question. The state is utterly incompetent, especially in a population of mixed creeds, to teach dogmatic religion; and yet, without dogmatic religious teaching, morality is apt to be little more than a name. If Mr. Purdy objects to this, he is certainly at liberty to analyze it, to dissect it, and to criticize it. —LESLIE J. SMITH Salem, Or., Sept. 23, 1922.
