were just a bit bigger he'd probably have a cigar named for him. Jackie will be seen in "Trouble," his latest production, at the Oregon theatre for two days, beginning today.

Another special screen production is announced for the Liberty theatre next Sunday when the picture, "Conceit," will begin a three day engagement. "Conceit" is heralded as another all-star production from the Selznick studios and if it measures up to the least bit favorably with its predecessor, "A Man's Home," local photoplay fans are assured another splendid evening's entertainment.

"Sisters," truly a wonderful motion picture which was made from the novel by Kathleen Norris, which is showing at the Liberty theatre, is a lesson which every boy and girl, man and wife, and prospective couples should see. It shows the great-

No other boy character since the comic supplement creation Buster Brown, has been honored as has "The Kid," Jackie Coogan. The little film star has had caps, shoes, suits, dolls and overalls named after him and if he should see. It shows the greatness of love and the splendor of a woman's courage.

Director Frank Lloyd knows his mob psychology.

Efficiently being one of his high voltage points, he engaged Maurice, the dancer, to stage the extravagant dance scenes for Norma Talmadge's "The Eternal Flame," which will be the attraction at the Oregon Theatre Saturday evening.

Johnny did not have prize fighter's hands. He seemed out of place with the ordinary pugilists. Except when he was in the ring. Then his delicate hands, clinched for a punch, made connections. His "right" was deadly. It connected with Kid Rowan's chin in the sixth round of a lightweight bout in New York and ended the Kid's championship aspirations. But Johnny's hand hung limp at his side. He thought of his future. See Bert Lytell in "The Right That Failed" at the Liberty theatre beginning tomorrow.

If opinions of experts are worth anything, then "The Man From Funeral Range," Wallace Reid's Paramount starring vehicle which will be displayed at the BIGH theatre next Friday is certain to become one of his most popular pictures. Mr. Reid says he is delighted with the photoplay and that it gives him a characterization of which any screen player may well feel proud.

Wallace MacDonald gives an excellent portrayal of a weak-willed, easily led young man in "Caught Bluffing," the Universal attraction starring Frank Mayo at the BIGH Sunday and Monday. Much of the story winds about a gambling house and saloon in the Klondike, in which resorts MacDonald in his screen characterization displays, the figure.

Every lady that attends the final showing of "Sisters" at the Liberty tonight will receive a beautiful "Tiger Chrysanthemum" the gift of Mr. C. F. Breithaupt, Salem's leading florist. Some time ago Mr. Breithaupt gave away free to every lady who attended the Liberty a Ben W. Olcott carnation, and the flower that he is giving away tonight is a favorite of Walter M. Pierce, the Democratic candidate for governor. The "Tiger Chrysanthemum" was named by Woodrow Wilson. "Sisters" the show at the Liberty is a very clever production. The cast is an exceptional one. It is headed by Matt Moore. The play is taken from the novel of the same name, which was written by Kathleen Norris. It is a story with a real plot and a great lesson can be learned from it. Don't forget every lady in attendance at this show tonight gets a wonderful chrysanthemum, the gift of Mr. Breithaupt and one of these flowers is worth the price of admission.

COMING TO LIBERTY SUNDAY

MASTODON BONE IS ON DISPLAY

Fossils Found at St. Paul Indicate Oil May be in That Community

The ball-and-socket leg joint of a mastodon, a bone more than a foot in diameter, and what is left of a mastodon tooth that has been pretty well cut away, are part of the interesting display being shown by the St. Paul Oil company at its temporary office, 331 1/2 State street.

Other things are shown, also—layers of sea shells, in their rocky matrices and oil sands red and black, and oil sandstones. The sea shells tell of a teeming, incredibly prolific marine life at one stage of the Willamette valley's history. The mastodon tells of the later ponderous animal life, and of the luxuriant vegetable growth that must have accompanied it—and from the combination, the marine life, the vegetable and the animal life, all of which decayed and gave their substance back to the earth, petroleum is formed.

The company is now legally authorized to sell stock, applying at least 80 per cent of its stock sales to actual construction work at the property, and paying all overhead from the remainder. The sale of some stock is essential to carrying on the work, as the earlier capitalization couldn't last forever, and drilling is expensive. The company has perpetual leases on 1463 acres of lands around the present well, so that there would be an enormous resource in leases alone if the oil is found.

The opinion of geologists is that the Cascade range was first thrown up from the original level of the continent, then the Coast range, with the California and Oregon valleys between them. The basalt dike at Oregon City, crossing the valley, was later, and it operates as an impassable barrier for all the oil that is believed to have been deposited in the valley when the marine life and the fats and the chemicals from the later vegetable and big-animal life began to combine to make petroleum or "rock-oil" as it was once known. The southern Oregon country is quite broken; but the lower Willamette-valley shows strata practically unbroken by any kind of intrusion or eruption save that Oregon City dike. It is a natural oil basin, say geologists. The character of these animal and vegetable deposits that make oil is so clearly shown by the display now being made from the St. Paul country, that those who are investigating it agree that it's a fine prospect.

The exhibit is worth seeing, apart from any bearing it might have on the oil question. These original "Oregon Pioneers," the shellfish and the hairy mammoths, ought to be given some sort of a send-off.
