GRAND
"Theodora" the eighth wonder of the world. Cost three million to produce.

Joe Laird and his wife, after a hasty marriage, awaken some years later to the realization that only their two little children hold them together. This is the beginning of one of the most interesting stories ever filmed, an adaptation of Clara Louise Burnham's famous novel, "Heart's Haven." It is beginning Sunday afternoon.

So many people were used in filming some of the scenes for "Theodora," the gigantic film spectacle which will be presented at the Grand theatre today that it was necessary for Commandatore Ambrosio and his corps of assistants to divide the 25,000 people into "classes" according to their height and instruct them in details to their positions during the action. This was essential, because it would have been possible for taller persons to completely hide from the camera scores of those immediately behind, especially in scenes like that in the Hippodrome where they are packed like the legendary sardines. Just before the forty lions are loosed by the empress' orders.

There's a nice up-to-the-minute, little infernal machine in "Pink Gods," a Paramount picture featuring Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood, and with Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hutton, Adolphe Menjou and others in the cast. Diamonds are the theme—illicit buying, stealing and mining of gems in the fields of Kimberley. The dominating male figure is John Queich, played by James Kirkwood, while the tragedy and romance are supplied by Bebe Daniels and Anna Q. Nilsson. The villain and character depiction is furnished by Hutton, Menjou and others. It will be shown at the Oregon theatre today.

gels when three months old. This is his first picture. He is the youngest child that ever took direction in a set. Bruce shows a great liking for music and dancing. At the Oregon tomorrow.

James Dugan, who for many years was employed as an assistant director by the Fox and Goldwyn studios, and who assisted in the direction of the last two Olive Thomas pictures, was chosen by Director John A. Barry as his assistant in making "Trust Your Wife," starring Katherine MacDonald. This production will be the attraction at the Liberty theatre today.

William S. Hart, popular Artcraft star, has scored another bullseye in his latest western picture, "Wagon Tracks" which is doing large business at the Bligh theatre this week. As Buckskin Hamilton, a desert guide, Mr. Hart has one of the strongest roles he has essayed in many months and his supporting company headed by Jane Novak and Robert M-Kim, is excellent.

When "A Rogue's Romance," which will be shown at Bligh theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, was projected in Paris the atmosphere and backgrounds were so true to the environs of the city that it was hard for the Parisian to believe that it was produced anywhere but their home city. But such was not the case. The picture was produced on the west coast with Earle Williams and Rodolph Valentino in the stellar roles.

How many women are there who are just as adept at shopping for motor cars accessories and lubricating oils as they are at the local market for their meats and groceries?

Marie Provost, who drives the winning car of the thrilling auto race in "The Married Flapper," the Universal attraction directed by Stuart Paton, at the Bligh theatre next Sunday, does all the buying of oils and parts for her Cadillac roadster, not even subject to the approval of her chauffeur. It's a hobby.

In her role of the wife of a young American sportsman whose hobby is racing cars, she feels perfectly at ease at the wheel of the speediest and most powerful one in hubby's garage. There are many scenes in "The Married Flapper" where a double would have been used had not Miss Provost proved herself such an expert driver.

but that duty cannot be adequately discharged in narrowness and selfishness.
"That we may be guided to a just judgement of the time and occasion for further proof our interest in the common cause of humanity, and in choosing the methods whereby to discharge the obligation thus created, will be, I am sure, a fitting prayer for this Armistice anniversary."

Watch the Man With the Advertising Idea

---he may be the coming brains of your business

Look over the young executives who direct the retail and the manufacturing businesses of New York.

A surprisingly large percentage of them have reached their goals by advocating advertising, by directing the advertising and by making the advertising work.

If yours is a business which doesn't advertise, don't close your ears to the story of your young men. Help them to think it out—listen to their plans and their hopes. Add the counsel of years of experience to the minds of the men who are planning the future of your business.

Did you ever expect that iron could be advertised profitably? Few advertising men did. Did you ever expect to eat trade-marked grape-fruit? It is an accomplished fact at thousands of breakfasts this morning. Did you ever think the dairymen could profitably use the forces of publicity, or that a barber shop could grow to twenty-five, largely by the power of the written word and an ideal of service.

The coming executives realize that a business exists, in the last analysis, in the minds of its customers, rather than in four walls and a roof, and, perhaps, that is why they are the coming executives.

DARING AMERICAN GIRL IN BERLIN RACE

Suzanne Koerner, 15 years old, is the first American girl to enter a motorcycle race of this kind. It was a 1,000 kilometer race from Berlin to Leipzig, Breslau and return. Miss Koerner's father is manager of the American Steel and Engineering Association of Berlin and was also in the race. Miss Koerner was the last of her party to admit defeat, but with calm and mud-choking her engine she was unable to go on. An idea of the difficulties combated by Miss Koerner may be secured from the fact that only five of her twenty competitors finished.
