That motion picture actors generally are better dressers than those appearing on the stage is the belief of Charles Ray, whose first super-feature "A Tailor Made Man," is coming next Saturday to the Oregon theatre. This is due largely, Mr. Ray says, to the greater realism demanded of screen players.

Undoubtedly one of the most brilliant women that at least the ancient world has ever produced, Theodora, wife of Justinian, was truly one of the first of her sex to know political power, for she surely ruled the Roman empire through her husband. This is borne out by all historians and the fact forms one of the basic fabrics of the plot of Victorien Sardou's immortal drama which now has been made into a wonderful screen spectacle, "Theodora." It will be presented at the Grand theatre today.

Especially seasonable for summer weather is Anita Stewart's latest production "Rose of the Sea," which is to be shown at the Liberty theatre. As the title indicates the heroine is a girl who comes from the seashore; but later windings of the plot take her through dramatic occurrences in big city life. The capable cast supporting the star includes Thomas Holding, Margaret Landis, Kate Lester, Hallow Cooley, John P. Lockney and Charles Belcher.

Man's passion for gems of one sort or another have led to adventure and crime from time immemorial. Many are the jewels whose histories are chronicled in letters of blood, records of shattered lives, devastated hopes, wrecked ambitions. A tragic sequence and one which brings to the picture a touch of pathos, is found in "Man's Law and God's" featuring Jack Livingston and Ethel Shannon, which is to be the feature attraction commencing Wednesday at the Liberty theatre.

"Blood and Sand," a Paramount picture starring Rodolph Valentino, is said to be a big production with a big popular star. It comes to the Grand theatre next Saturday and Sunday, and Manager Kupper says that it is one of the finest attractions shown at his playhouse this season. Lila Lee and Nita Naldi popular screen artists, are the featured players.

House Peters probably could play any role in filmdom, but his forte is parts requiring a simple directness and manly simplicity. Such a characterization is his in "Human Hearts," in which he stars at the Oregon theatre Wednesday. He is supported by a notable cast including Edith Hallor, George Hackathorne, Mary Philbin and Gertrude Claire. King Baggot directed the picture.

BLIGH THEATRE

"Kindred of the Dust," will begin a three day engagement at the Oregon theatre today. Miriam Cooper and Ralph Graves play the leading parts in this production, supported by Lionel Belmore, Pat Rooney, John Herdman, Bruce Guerin, Carolyn Rankin, Eugene Bessmer, W. J. Ferguson, Bessie Waters and Maryland Morne.

Here is an actress who has had domestic bliss for twenty years, has raised two stalwart sons, and has continued with her career since the time she was carried in her mother's arms on the stage in one of her father's productions. Her name is Claire McDowell, the leading emotional star of the old Biograph days, and now famous for her "mother" role. She is appearing as the "mother" in "Heart's Haven," all-star production, adapted from the Clara Louise Burnham novel, now showing at the Liberty theatre.

Freddie Walker is a song and dance comedian from the musical comedy ranks, a bit out of the ordinary, which gives a touch to his humorous offering called "His Family." The author of this clever skit has shown remarkable aptitude in the selection of lines which are well placed and funny. The songs and dancing are especially strong and satisfying at the Bligh, today and tomorrow only.

Does the flapper continue her flapping after marriage? Does she make a better wife than the old-fashioned girl? The modern flapper is the puzzle of psychologists. See "The Married Flapper," with Marie Prevost and you might be able to analyze her. At the Bligh today, tomorrow.

The Apache is a term given to a band of street thieves in Paris. They are members of the underworld, a bohemian gang that frequent the music halls, cabarets and cafes of the poorer quarter and here enjoy their dances and revels.

In the days before the Chicago and some of the other modern dances came into the limelight, the Apache dance was considered risqué and many were horrified when the dance was first shown on the stage. It was considered real Parisienne and attracted many curious persons when first performed in this country.

The Apache dance tells the story of an Apache's treatment of his "moll" or girl and is really a narrative set to music. Rudolph Valentino, who is as noted for his dancing ability as for his acting, is an expert in the Apache dance. In fact, it was this step that first brought him into the limelight.

In "A Rogue's Romance," which will be shown at the Bligh theatre on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Valentino does this dance in full, showing the steps that were a shock to the American public in the days when the waltz, caprice, mazurka, schottische and polka were the chief attractions at the dance halls and the lancers and minuet considered sport.

The Hickman Bessey Stock company will present another of their famous comedy dramas at the Bligh theatre Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

It is reported that David Lloyd George is to get $500,000 for his memoirs. Prices have advanced considerably since Milton was paid $75 for the manuscript of "Paradise Lost" and old Dr. Goldsmith peddled "The Vicar of Wakefield" for a few dollars to pay his pressing debts.

MEACHAM TO TALK ON OREGON TRAIL

Baker Chamber of Commerce Secretary to Appear Here Monday

The pungent smoke of the camp fire built of buffalo chips, the sweaty, salty smell of the laboring oxen, the thunder of the thousands of buffalo as they migrated north or south across the prairies, the crack of the rifle, the yells of the Indians, the dust of the desert and the dreary days and months of wondering who would be the next to furnish the name for the pitiful little mounds that dotted the road—all these are to be a part of the wonderful story to be told at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon Monday noon.

Walter B. Meacham, for many years secretary of the Baker City Chamber of Commerce, is to be the speaker. He is making a tour of the state, telling the people about their own "Old Oregon Trail," of its strong men and its brave women and its deathless influence on American history.

Mr. Meacham is to speak at Willamette university Monday forenoon at the regular chapel hour, 11:30, before his engagement at Chamber of Commerce. He leaves immediately after the speaking, for Astoria, to deliver the same message. The story he tells is said to be one of the most fascinating ever presented in Oregon. He spoke for an hour, before the state convention of commercial secretaries at Portland, Friday night.

The luncheon will be served at the usual hour.

EDITORIALS OF THE PEOPLE

Hats Off to the Flag

Editor: Statesman:

Since our parade today I am wondering how many men in Salem know that they should remove their hats when the flag passes. I say our parade, because I feel that it was partly mine, as I am an ex-service man.

I noticed as the parade went down the street that about one in 50 men removed his hat. What is the matter? Have the people of Salem forgotten about our great war where the American flag stood for what was right? Even if they have forgotten about the great war don't they owe the American flag some respect?

It is a shame, a disgrace to the people of Salem that more respect was not shown to our flag today. Next time let's show that we respect the flag of our country, and remove our hats when the flag passes.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

It was well done—

Armistice day was appropriately celebrated in Salem.

Some one defines a nickel as a measure of Christian pity.

C. Lachele worked from the ground up in Salem, and built up a good and useful industry, in the Angora Rug Co. Last evening his plant was wiped out by fire, with only $2,000 insurance on $30,000 worth of property. All his friends everywhere hope he may start over again, and soon retrieve his great loss.

The decision to completely equip and man the Salem fire department, at the polls on Tuesday, was soon justified, if any justification was needed.

A Salem wag purrs that beastly weather is when it rains cats and dogs.

Also, this same Barker declares that man is the only animal that blushes—or has occasion to.

And this identical bird remarks that everybody seems joyful all around—the men who were elected ought to be pleased, and the ones who were trimmed say they are satisfied.

And he declares the ant is a splendid preacher—he says nothing.

And that the insect that lives on the least nourishment is the moth—it eats holes.

The trustees of Willamette university have formally named the James T. Matthews chair of mathematics. This is a deserved compliment for long and faithful services and splendid ability—and for being loyal and trusted friend and good fellow to every student at that institution for the past 30 years—or is it 40, or ever since the woods were burned? Anyway, if Professor Matthews was not on board the ship Lausanne when the first collection for the founding of the university was taken up, it was no fault of his. Had he been around them, he would have been in on the collection as a contributor.

The Angora Rug company will have to be rebuilt, or the race of cowboys will become extinct. At that plant the materials for all the chaparajos or "chaps" of North America were turned out. There can be no true race of cowboys or "buckaroos" without their "chaps."

SALEM STUDENTS ACTIVE AGGIES

High Marks in Scholarship and Athletics Made By High School Products

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis, Nov. 11.—Salem and Marion county students are active in scholastic and student affairs at O.A.C. Of the 68 Salem students registered 20 are taking commerce, 12 engineering, 7 home economics, 9 agriculture, 5 mining and 19 other courses.

Mary Bayne is probably the most active Salem co-ed at O.A.C. She is a senior in vocational education and a member of Delta Psi Kappa, national honorary physical education sorority. She is secretary of the student body and a former member of the greater O.A.C. committee.

Athletically Salem is outranked by none, seven varsity "O" men calling Salem their home. Arthur Ross, captain of the varsity basketball team and senior in agriculture is one of the oldest letter men at O.A.C. Amory and Luke Gill, former Salem athletes, registered in commerce and agriculture, are two of the most sensational athletes in the Pacific coast conference. Amory "Sats" Gill won a place on the conference basketball team, his first year of college basketball, and the football reputation made by Luke Gill is envied by many.

Other men who have captured the coveted varsity "O" are Ed Clarke, a three year letter man in football, registered in electrical engineering; Alonzo Patchin, a senior in agriculture and three year varsity wrestler; Lloyd Stenstrom, a wrestler and senior in mining and Hubert Tasto, a varsity baseball man registered in commerce.

Several students who have distinguished themselves by student activities and membership in honor societies are Bernard Nutting, senior in forestry and a member of Xi Sigma Pi, national honorary forestry fraternity; Katherine Marshall, junior in commerce, a pledge to Scribe, women's journal.

DALLAS VICTIM OF SALEM BOYS

Second Football Team of High School Defeats Fast Eleven Saturday

Salem high second team came home Saturday night with the scalps of the Dallas high school football team dangling to their belts. The Dallas lads for years have had a fast basketball team and they have been mighty hard to beat, with all the stuff that the whole Salem school could ever put on the ball. But in football, Salem high has the injunction on the westerners, and it won't come off.

The Salem-high team was never in serious danger from the Dallas assault. The good training that the local lads have at the hands of Coach Huntington told every inch of the game, and they tromped bravely down the field with the ball tucked under their wings, for three as fine touchdowns as anybody ever made. They kicked two of the goals, missing only one chance to make it unanimous.
