capturing Phil Lawson, a crooked promoter, who is also wanted for murder. The pursuit takes Borden from the Northwest across the border, straight to the financial heart of New York.

In the metropolis the Mounted catches his man, only to lose him again. The criminal doubles back on the trail and returns to the wilderness. But Borden catches up with him and succeeds in his quest. There is a pleasant romance attached to the story which Neal Hart is a rugged figure as balances its dramatic moments the red-coated figure and his support includes the charming Violet Palmer and Ed Roseman who, as the villain, enacts a picturesque part. Charles E. Bartlett wrote and directed the feature.

Charles Ray in "A Tailor Made Man" is the stellar attraction at the Oregon theater commencing tonight. Adapted to the screen from one of the outstanding stage successes of the last several seasons, "A Tailor Made Man" is said to afford to Mr. Ray opportunities to display his utmost talents to supreme advantage—in fact, to score one of the great triumphs of his already notable screen career.

"Blood and Sand" is announced as being one of the most colorful productions in years. It is a story of Spain and the life of a bull-fighter, giving all the verve and romance of such an existence without presenting those features of a bull fight not enjoyed by American audiences. It will be shown at the Grand theater today. Lila Lee and Nita Naldi have the leading feminine roles.

as a mechanic with years of practical experience on top of a natural aptitude for mechanics, Mr. Eyerly can bring to the average car owner or operator some information of real, lasting value.

If you wish to know a little more about the things that all your car—the rheumatism and the colic and the dandruff and the toothache and all the little indispositions that an almost humanly balky car can display—write The Statesman, auto department. If the information isn't right on hand, it will be secured, and published. Maybe it is the same thing that worries the next neighbor, also, and he's been suffering in silence, ashamed to tell the world that he didn't know all about his own car. This is localized information, especially good for Oregon conditions of climate, weather, roads, "n" everything.

ARMOUR PLAN MAY PREVAIL

President Believed Favorably Inclined to Proposal Made by Packer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—President Harding will make the final decision for the government on the proposal that Armour & Co. purchase Morris & Co., another of the "big five" Chicago packers, it was indicated today in high administration circles.

The president already has discussed the matter with J. Ogden Armour and will go over it in detail with Secretary Wallace as soon as the experts of the department of agriculture have completed their study of the plan.

Open Mind Maintained.
The executive was represented as being of the opinion, on the basis of the information now in his possession, that there would be no objection at law to the proposed consolidation in view of the stricter government regulations of the packing industry, provided for in the packers and stock yards control act. It was emphasized however, that he was keeping an open mind until all the facts bearing on the situation had been presented.

Secretary Wallace said today that there would be no definite decision for several days. Among matters under consideration by the government, it was understood was the probable effect of the projected merger upon the subsidiary corporations of the two principal companies.

Precedent Already Set.
The administration officers said that a favorable decision by the government on Mr. Armour's proposal would not necessarily set a precedent for governmental approval of consolidation of corporations in other lines of industry such as that recently proposed in the case of several of the so-called independent steel companies. It was explained that quite a different situation was presented since the government regulation of the packing industry was provided by law, where there was no such regulation in the steel and various other lines of business.

Hard Hit, Claim.
In outlining to the president the situation which Armour & Co. believed made desirable and necessary the consolidation of that company and Morris & Co., Mr. Armour was understood to have emphasized that the packing industry was particularly hard hit by the recent general business depression. His opinion was that unless there were mergers within the industry, some of the packers would be unable to get along.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adole Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER 166
THE THINGS DICKY HAD TO SAY ON LELLA'S WEDDING MORNING.

Lella's wedding day!
I awakened early in the morning and looked eagerly through the windows of the sun parlor to see whether my little friend would be a bride, whom "the sun shines on." I knew enough of her intensely feminine nature to be sure that rain or shadows upon her wedding day would distress her immeasurably, and was glad indeed to see the sun rising clear and bright.

The wedding ceremony was to be read at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but Dicky and I had been bidden to come to the old Paige home for breakfast with the members of the wedding party. Maj. Grantland and two or three Paige "cousins." Lella had expressed a wish to have the pink and white dogwood blossoms piled against the holly and pine branches which banked the walls of the stately drawing room, and "Cousin" Jim Paige had promptly promised that he would head a party of wedding guests who would go to the woods and bring in and arrange the blossoms at an hour near enough to that set for the ceremony to insure their keeping their freshness.

Certain Complications.

To tell the truth, I wasn't exceedingly enthusiastic over the morning's program. The presence in the same party of Dicky, Edith Fairfax, "Cousin" Jim Paige, Hugh Grantland and myself promised complications, which, even if they were not unpleasant, might well prove more or less embarrassing.

That Edith Fairfax cared hopelessly for Dicky I had long known and "Cousin" Jim Paige had confided to me his feeling for Edith when we were seated next each other at the dinner "Aunt Dora" had given. I had seen also his jealousy of Dicky, something which had worried me absurdly.

MISS FIELD ENGAGED TO ENGLISHMAN

The engagement of Miss Gwendolin Field of Chicago to Mr. Archibald Edmonstone is announced. Miss Field is the granddaughter of the late Marshal Field, from whose estate she came into $500,000. She is living with her uncle and aunt, Lord and Lady Beatty, at their home in England.

Then, too, there was always before my imagination the possible consequences of the jealous feeling which Dicky cherished toward Hugh Grantland—a feeling concerning which I acquitted myself of all blame, but which I was just enough to acknowledge was warranted by the officer's attitude toward me.

There was no way out of the affair, however, and I rose and dressed as quietly and rapidly as possible, that Dicky might have the room to himself when he should awaken. We have been accustomed so long to the really spacious quarters of our house at Marvin, with a large room for each of us, that it is irksome to Dicky to crowd his belongings into a small room which he must share with me.

I was not successful, however, in my attempt, for as I was arranging my hair in front of the mirror, Dicky's voice startled me into dropping my brush.

A Storm Averted.

"What the devil are you up at this unearthly hour for?" he inquired. "Oh, I remember, that jamboree over at the Paige meadow! Well, I'll tell the world I feel more like turning over for another forty winks than I do like trotting through the woods looking for dogwood blossoms! If that isn't just like a woman, upsetting everything to get just the kind of flowers she wants."

"As it happened, a man 'upset things' this particular time," I answered demurely, picking up my hair brush. "As I understand it, Lella simply said she loved the dogwood blossoms, and would like to have them around her, and Dr. Jim Paige promptly organized this hunt for them."

"Oh, of course, he could be depended on to roll over and play dead when either of the Fairfax sisters lifted a finger!" Dicky growled. "There's devotion for you! He's so dead in love with Edith that he'll get up at this hour in the morning to hunt for flowers for her sister's wedding. That's his own business, however, but why in thunder he has to rope in the rest of us—"

He was stretching and flexing his muscles now, his inevitable preliminary to rising. I finished my hair, arranged my side of the bureau in orderly fashion, and hastily departed to my own side of the room to finish dressing. I did not want to add any trifle to the annoyance he evidently was feeling.

"Gad, but that fellow makes me sick," he went on. "He and the deah majah ought to be tied together and left in the woods somewhere until they get a little same again. Of all she mooning calves I ever saw in my life they're the limit! But I suppose women like that sort of thing."

Now this speech brought me several moods in flashing succession. First, anger, for I knew that he meant me. Second, jealousy, because he evidently resented Jim Paige's feeling toward Edith Fairfax. And then both were dwarfed by a sense of the ridiculous which sometimes rises to the surface from some depth in my nature and drives lesser waves of feeling back.

I turned to Dicky, striking a pose of reverential admiration.

"What colossal wisdom!" I exclaimed, saucily. "T. Sandys on women! Really, dear, you ought to retire to a cave and be a hermit or a mystic for awhile. Your philosophy is so—"

"If you don't get out of here," Dicky interrupted, grinning. "I'll stage a cave man stunt that'll keep you away from that breakfast. Now beat it, and let me dress."

other than committee amendments and already with amendments in order, indications were that Democrats, working jointly with Republicans, who oppose the bill, would endeavor to reimpose excess profits and surtaxes as a means of providing funds for ships.

Dry Amendment Expected.
Democratic leaders predicted a flood of amendments would be offered including an amendment sponsored by the dry element barring liquor on American ships. Another point expected to result in a fight by any proposal under which foreign ships would be permitted to engage in coastwise trade.

Notwithstanding signs of an impending fight in the house, the senate is regarded by advocates of the measure as the most dangerous point. A new ruling on debate is possible there and a number of Republican leaders have expressed doubt whether the legislation can be disposed of by March 3 when all bills die with the end of the congress.

PASHA CLAIMS TURK WARSICK

Moslem Leader Predicts New Democracy Will Be Created in Near East

PARIS, Nov. 15.—(By The Associated Press)—Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation to the Lausanne peace conference discussed the Near East situation today, with Premier Poincare and at the conclusion of the interview declared:

"My three-quarters of an hour conference with M. Poincare was most satisfactory."

Says Want Peace
After a sleepless night and a busy day, Ismet received 50 or more correspondents at his quarters at the Hotel Crillon. It is not certain that he was to go to London. So far I have received no official invitation to do so.

"If there are any fresh incidents at Constantinople, it won't be our fault. We want peace also. You may be sure that whatever we sign we will not violate."

Ismet said he had been officially sized at $90,000. J. F. Britt of Portland is named as attorney-in-fact for Oregon. The firm will do a contracting business.

informed that the Lausanne conference was still set for November 20.

While photographers were busy with flashlights, Ismet began a short speech. "We want peace at Lausanne because we have a war ravaged country, in need of reconstruction. The world must not believe that we are militarists or that we are inflated by our recent successes. Mark my word, we are going to create a new Turkey in which there will be democracy as pure as in any western country. We intend to live independent nationally in every sense and the Turkish people will not renounce in any degree this independence for any reason."

In response to questions Ismet reiterated the intention of the Turkish government not to recognize the pre-war capitulations which he asserted had been nonexistent since 1914.

Right!
Patience was the subject of the teacher's discourse, and to illustrate her point she drew on the blackboard a picture of a small boy sitting on the bank of a stream, fishing.

"You see this lad, children," she said beaming on her pupils. "He's fishing. Well, even the pleasure of fishing requires patience. He must be prepared to sit and wait." And she dilated on the importance of being patient.

"Now, then, can any of you boys tell me what we need most when we go fishing?" she invited. Like one voice came a chorus from the class: "Bait!"
