This is under that principle of the state constitution whereby no money shall be drawn from the state treasury except upon appropriation made by law, and there is no law authorizing such withdrawal in this instance.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST
Big day in Salem—Considering "everybody was in Cervallis."

There is a man out in North Salem who is so deaf he only hears the voice of conscience with difficulty.

The man up in East Salem who would rather play golf than eat has a wife who would rather play whist than cook. So they get along fine.

There is a Salem barber who says that if spirits want to communicate with him they must talk, not knock—he gets enough raps as it is, from the living.

"May I have a spoon?" asked a man in a State street restaurant. "Not with me," said the pretty waitress, "I'm busy."

The Kemalists say the Sultan of Turkey surrendered the caliphate when he flew the coop. Reflecting that he saved his head, perhaps he gets consolation. What would a caliphate be to a Turk sultan with a slit gootie string?

The average woman has a vocabulary of only 800 words, says an expert. If he ever listened in to the broadcasting over a backyard fence, he would conclude that she seems to know all the rest of the 400,000 in the unabridged dictionary.

Mrs. J. K. Walker, of Atlantic City, gave birth to a bouncing (or bumper) boy in a Ford car. She named him Henry, of course.

Talking about Thanksgiving, did you know there is nothing in the proverbial Job's turkey. Job never had a turkey. The turkey was a native of America, and Europeans never heard of it till the new world was discovered by Columbus thousands of years after Job, the richest man in all the East, was gathered to his fathers. Some early settlers in America erroneously thought the bird came from Turkey, and it was so named.

WHEAT RAISING IS DECREASING
Tendency Likely to Continue Until Consumption Is Equal of Production

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—An outstanding fact facing the American wheat farmer, says the annual yearbook of the department of agriculture, is that while the per capita consumption of wheat in this country has steadily increased there has been a gradual decrease in per capita production. This tendency probably will continue, it is added, at least until the United States reaches the point where it consumes practically all of the wheat it produces.

Careful Study Made
The economic situation of the wheat crop, production and marketing, from section to international trade, is presented in the yearbook. The discussion is the result of combined research and study by a number of the nation's leading agronomists and agricultural economists connected with the department.

It is shown that nearly a third of the farmers in the United States grow wheat. Only corn and hay exceed this bread crop in acreage occupied and normally only these two crops and cotton exceed wheat in value. The wheat crop as a whole has much to do with the prosperity of the nation, says the yearbook, because the grain enters into foreign trade to a greater extent than any other crop except cotton.

The country has exported a surplus of wheat in every year of its history except 1836, besides keeping pace with an ever increasing demand at home. During the past 20 years, however, the yearbook states, the value of exports has decreased except under the artificial stimulation of the recent war.

City Folk Best Eaters
Because of improvements in milling processes which make bread more attractive, increasing prosperity, and the increasing proportion of the population in the cities, the per capita consumption of wheat has increased in the United States, for the past 80 years.

City dwellers eat more bread, per capita, than country residents because of the lack of gardens in cities, the comparative cheapness of bread and because no home cooking is necessary. The fact that the trend of population is toward cities should have much bearing on the future consumption of bread, it is stated.

War Interrupts Trend
Before 1850 the per capita consumption of wheat in this country was 3.8 bushels; from 1875 to 1884 it was 4.9 bushels, and from 1895 to 1914, 5.6 bushels. The rising trend was interrupted by the world war, but department officials believe it has been resumed.

If the nation is to increase its bread ration to any great extent it must grow more wheat or import it, the department says.

A Los Angeles man will marry a woman whom he has been directed to wed by a spirit message from his dead wife. But he might save a lot of money to have the message repeated. There may be some mistake in the name.—Los Angeles Times.

The Associated Charities belongs to the city of Salem. It was organized for the sole purpose of serving our unfortunate fellow citizens and with that as its function, the opportunity is offered to put into practice the fundamental principles of Christianity and humanity.

The test of a man's character is to be found in the altruistic service he renders his fellow men. That is the test of religion. That is the test of common human brotherhood.

All are asked to contribute something, great or small; young and old are asked to give their mites to help those who are not as fortunate or as happy as we are.

Let us share in this good purpose. Members of churches and those of no church; members of fraternal orders and those who do not belong to any lodge—let us all in the name of the great family of humanity and the most merciful God make those who are in need in our city feel that their brothers and sisters have been weighed in the balance and not found wanting.
